ELECTRIC RANGE!

Of course, the range was just one of the things I liked—but I realized it would give me more time to enjoy my home, because I'd spend less time in the kitchen. That's how the Electric Range helped me fall in love with the house.

"We've found that potential home buyers are interested in electrical equipment," says

MR. OSCAR DREISEN, of Dreisen & Freedman, Silver Spring, Maryland. "We know that because there were traffic jams when we opened our model house, and fifty houses were quickly sold.

"Naturally we include Electric Ranges in the kitchen, because this is an electric home. The Electric Range gives the home buyer cool, automatic cooking—the kind that's fast, economical and clean. All our kitchens are electric!"

• Kitchen equipment in the Dreisen & Freedman homes includes electric refrigerator, electric dishwasher-sink with food waste disposer, and ventilating fan. And the range? Like all the other equipment—of course, it's ELECTRIC!

• Prices of these all-electric homes range from $12,750 to $14,250, depending on whether or not they have basements. They are three-bedroom ranch-type, with five different exterior designs to choose from.

Industry Spotlight

Washington, D. C. — There may be more paper work in the offing for realtors if Congress adopts any one of several bills now being considered. A House committee is discussing the pros and cons of more realtors paying unemployment taxes on employees. The present law requires only those with eight employees or more to pay the tax. The new bills would also provide additional funds for grant or loan to the states to pay their unemployment benefits.

Never let the left hand know what the right hand is doing! Although there's some talk around Washington about lifting credit controls on houses, Congressional committees may hamstring the possibility ... at least for a time. Banking committees of both houses may propose extension of the Defense Production Act. This would restore the power to adjust credit controls to the FHA and Federal Reserve Board. And it would erase the mandatory relaxation of regulation X ("Regulation A" to builders) along with related controls approved by Congress last September.

Strong sentiment seems to exist in Congress to extend credit controls and allocation powers, but there is talk of letting price, wage, and rent controls expire. One of the opponents to a regulated economy, Representative Jesse P. Wolcott, says, "Regulations X and W don't really battle inflation. All they do is cut buying of houses and consumer durables below normal demand."

Many realtors and builders would cry "Aye, Aye" to the Congressman's statement. In Boston, one builder with 14 houses underway reports that half of his units under construction are undersold ... his first such experience since the war. In Detroit, where strikes have taken a toll of home prospects, a prominent realtor says, "Our sales have dropped 25%. People just aren't buying."

The slow trend is prominent elsewhere. In Atlanta: dozens of new houses on the market for weeks, but few nibbles. In Chicago: some offices report sales down 15%. In San Francisco: even new apartments are going begging.

But the outlook is brighter. Material controls being loosened, the building pace is speeding up. Spring usually prods buying. Mortgage money looks as if it will be more plentiful. (See this issue: What's Happening to the Mortgage Market?)

FHA officials have flatly opposed increasing the interest rates on government-backed mortgages. FHA Commissioner Franklin D. Richards and T. B. King, VA director, told the mortgage bankers at their eastern conference that rate increases are not justified. Richards said FHA field offices received applications during the first quarter of this year at a 20% higher rate than for the same period last year.

End of the Controlled Materials Plan is officially in sight, says chief controller Manly Fleischmann. Aluminum is supposed to be virtually freed by January and most steel shapes by October. (What a steel strike will do to those plans is anyone's guess.) Copper won't be loose until later. Enough full copper isn't coming in to permit full civilian consumption.

THE SUPREME TEST .....

A REAL estate builder leaned back in his chair and studied the ad he had just written. He was quite satisfied. The copy extolled in glowing terms the merits of one of the houses he had just completed. He had done a good job of selecting the right words and putting them together in an interesting pattern.

And then the builder took another look at the ad, reading it as he hoped a prospective buyer might. He gulped a couple of times, and murmured to himself, "This won't sell. I wouldn't buy it." The copy landed in the waste basket.

That builder used a good test of salesmanship — probably the supreme one, not just for writing ads but for all kinds of selling. He became, for a moment, a prospect for a home and asked himself, "Would I buy this home myself?"

There are builders today, and perhaps you know a few, who are building and selling homes they wouldn't buy themselves. Inwardly, they know that the construction isn't just what it should be or the price is a little high or the basement is sure to leak. And yet they can't understand why those houses don't sell.

That same simple question, "Would I buy this myself?", can be used for every phase of the real estate business, whether it be building, selling, managing, appraising. Are we offering a product or service that is worth the money? If we are, that knowledge will engender the confidence, enthusiasm, and sincerity so necessary to the success of any business.

We're reminded of the real estate executive who wanted to start a management department. He knew there were management departments who felt their sole job was just to collect rents. But he felt that management service should consist of more than that. He didn't have the management experience to know what.

This fellow asked himself what kind of management service he would want if he owned a building. Then he wrote down the services and spent weeks figuring what it would cost to provide them for a certain building. After he was finished, he asked himself, "Would I buy this management service if I were the owner?"

With that approach, the executive built a successful management business.

There are many salesmen today, perhaps some of your own, who are listing and selling homes they wouldn't buy themselves. Granted, they may be able to afford a larger home or want a different type of architecture or another location. But there should be something about each property they list or sell that makes them feel honestly that they would buy it if they were the prospect. If they don't feel this, they're not salesmen — just peddlers.

Up until the last few months we haven't had to be so concerned about where our next tenant or client or buyer was coming from. There was a demand for houses and apartments and the business rolled in. But demand has softened. Vacancies are starting to crop up in apartments. New houses that would have been snatched up like hotcakes last year are standing idle. Old homes are staying on the listing shelf a little longer.

What do we do about it? We can plan ahead, analyze market conditions and forecasts, rejuvenate our sales programs, put more bite into our promotion. But as we do, let's not forget to ask ourselves an important question: "Would I buy this product or service myself, if I were the prospect?" If we answer it honestly, the results might be revealing.

WE BUILT A MANAGEMENT BUSINESS....

By W. E. ALTHAUSER, C.P.M.
Edward LeMaster Company
Memphis, Tennessee

... by mail

WHERE did your business come from? Where did you get it? These are the two questions that are asked most frequently by real estate firms planning on entering the property management field.

Before answering these questions, however, let's go back six years when we, ourselves, first entered this field.

Beginning without a single property to manage we literally had to start from "scratch." We figured that if we got any business, it would come mostly from four general sources:

- 1) Direct personal solicitation.
- 2) Recommendations of our service by others.
- 3) Indirect solicitation through letters, folders.
- 4) Sale of income property by our firm.

Undismayed by the warning of our friends that a small company such as ours did not have a chance against the competition of the old established firms, we set out to develop as much business from each of the above sources as we possibly could. At that time our firm consisted only of Edward LeMaster, one stenographer, and myself.

Being a small firm, and without a single property to manage, we were a little reluctant about trying to develop business through source No. 1 — direct personal solicitation. There was always that uneasy feeling that we might be asked the embarrassing question: "What properties are you now managing?"

No. 1 was out for the time being, or at least until we had a few properties we could talk about. We also decided we could not expect much from source No. 2 — recommendation by others — until we had become better known.

That left us with two sources from which we felt we had a chance of obtaining a start: No. 3, indirect solicitation through letters, folders, and No. 4, sale of income property by our firm on which we could obtain the management on the property sold. Of these two, No. 3 seemed to offer the best possibilities, so we concentrated all our efforts in that direction.

That was our beginning in the management business six years ago. Today, six years later, we are an Accredited Management Organization with 10 people in our organization and a management business that ranks along with firms that have been in the business 20 and 30 years.

Now to answer those questions of where our business came from and how we got it, we went back and checked the source of every property that we manage. Among them are some of the finest apartment buildings in Memphis, the second largest office building, stores, homes, medical centers, warehouses, garages, used car lots, parking lots, and even rooming houses.

The answer we came up with was very interesting to us for we had never stopped to see just how much business each of the four general sources had contributed. We found that:

Direct solicitation accounted for only 8¾% of all our business.

Recommendation by others, 33½%.

Files contain photos, description, sales record of every apartment property in Memphis

"Tools" the company uses to get business include variety market letters, folders, maps

You can build a management business from four general sources — personal solicitation, recommendations, direct mail, sale of income property. But what if you're starting a management department from scratch? This is a case study of the ideas a Memphis company used to become leading property managers

Indirect solicitation through letters, folders, 44%.

Sale of income property by our firm, 13¾%.

To answer the second question of how we got this business, let's take a look at a few of the "tools" we used. Space does not permit a separate reproduction of all of them, but the group illustration shows: LeMaster Letters, picture booklet of downtown properties, letters to realtors soliciting management business, folders offering properties for lease and for sale, post card preview of properties before they are placed on the open market, newspaper publicity of our projects, folder explaining our system of "Information on Every Property," office building bulletins, general solicitation letter stressing "Selling With Confidence" through our firm, promotional presentation of the "Doorway to Memphis," and folder pictures of homes sold by the company.

All of these were developed and used over a period of time to meet a given problem. The first thing we did, however, was to obtain the name and address of every apartment owner. We then began acquainting these owners and others (lawyers, doctors, realtors not in the management field, bankers, insurance companies) with our organization through a series of letters. These letters stressed not so much how good we were as property managers but how we were equipped to render them a service. We sent them samples of our various forms, statements, and records to be used in connection with each property.

During this time we were also making an inspection of every apartment building belonging to these owners and obtaining as much information about these as we could. We took pictures of the buildings, filed the negatives alphabetically in small pay envelopes for future use, and placed the finished pictures in leather booklets containing transparent coverings for each picture.

A complete description of each property was placed on the reverse side of its picture. Then, on special cards kept in our office, we recorded the owner's name, address, legal description of the property, lot size, sales and rental history, and any other information available. (See illustration.) This latter information, however, was not made public by property address, for we felt that some of the owners might object to it being openly displayed. We did, however, let the public know that we had such data on every property. And we got it over to them in such things as "Is Now the Time to Sell Multi-Family Buildings?" (See illustration.)

All of this took time and a lot of work, but it was necessary if we were going to attract any attention in the management field. Then, too, the information we were gathering gave us confidence. We knew that we were building up records and facts that no other management company had. We knew it would pay dividends.

After we completed sending out our first series of letters on how we were equipped to render a management service, we switched over to a series of one-page letters on subjects of current interest, such as rent control, income tax, and property repairs. These letters were designed to create goodwill, inspire confidence, and show owners that we were capable and prepared to do more than just collect their rent, pay their bills, and send them a check for the difference.

These letters were received so well that we decided to enlarge on the idea. We then began publishing our LeMaster Letters. At first we mailed out 300 or 400 of these letters, but then we began getting requests from others to be placed on our mailing list. In no time our list jumped to several thousand names, and we received a great many complimentary letters and phone calls. Needless to say, this pleased us very much, but even more pleasing was that our efforts began to pay off in properties to manage.

No longer did we have to be reluctant about making direct personal solicitation. Now we had something to "crow" about. Now we could go after those other three sources of business that we had passed up at the beginning.

By this time we had begun to get a few properties through the recommendation of others. We knew there were hundreds of people who, even though they did not own any income property of their own, were in a position to influence others who did. If we could just get them on our side we felt we would be well on our way to a successful management business. This group included doctors, lawyers, ministers, bankers, and realtors who had no management business of their own.

We made sure that a copy of every letter and every other piece of literature we sent out was mailed to this group. We wanted to keep our name constantly before them so that every time the words "property management" were mentioned they would think of Edward LeMaster Company. On the other hand, we had to convince them that we were qualified to manage property in a manner that would justify their recommendations.

This is a big and important source of management business and if it is developed properly you can have literally hundreds of people "working" for you without pay. All they want to know is that they can recommend you with confidence and that the job will be done right.

To spur our fellow realtors into throwing more business our way, we sent them letters offering 50% of all commissions collected by us on any rental property that they turned over to us for management or were in any way responsible for us acquiring. This payment would be made for the first 12 months the property was under our management. This is an excellent source of management business and should not be overlooked.

While we were working on obtaining the management of apartment buildings, we were not overlooking the possibilities in the uptown stores and commercial properties. This is a field that is perhaps the most difficult to break into. One reason is that most of the uptown property has been in the hands of the present owner or their families for years and they have been doing business with the same management firms for almost an equal number of years.

With comparatively few sales in such properties we knew it would be difficult to get our "foot in the door." To do that we launched an attack on two sides. First, we prepared a picture booklet of the uptown section as we did with apartment buildings. This had to be done on Sundays when the traffic was not so heavy. A folder was then prepared showing a picture of the booklet and the information it contained. The folder was sent to every uptown property owner as well as others on our regular mailing list.

Next we made a detailed inventory and analysis of each commercial property in the uptown section. We arranged with a national visible filing system company to supply a special double card printed appropriately to show the data on each property.

With this system and the photographs we could virtually show a prospect over all the uptown districts of Memphis without leaving our office.

We lost no opportunity in showing and telling owners and others about this system. It not only "put our foot in the door" but practically paid its way by new business obtained from the contacts in compiling the information.

By this time we had built up a very good volume of management business and were beginning to figure in more sales of income property. We were being approached voluntarily by both sellers and buyers. Other agents, knowing that we had pictures and information on all apartment buildings, began calling us when they had a prospect. They would tell us what their prospect wanted and if such a property was not openly in the market we would thumb through our picture booklets, select a building of the type and location wanted, and contact the owner about selling. The commission from the first building we sold repaid us several times over the cost in time and money spent in preparing the booklets.

We have one booklet in which we keep nothing but the pictures of apartment buildings currently offered for sale, either openly or otherwise. If a prospect comes in, all we have to do is to open this booklet and say, "Here is what is being offered. What would you like?"

Actually, of course, it is not that simple, but it does work in that general way. Then, too, it saves a lot of unnecessary running around and makes a very favorable impression on your prospect. You can depend on him telling others about your company.

Our folders are also good business-getters. When we have a listing of a property, we often prepare a folder picturing it and describing its location, features, cost.

These folders are our salesmen. When we mail out several hundred or a thousand of them, it is just like having that many salesmen out working for us. They have access to every home and business in the city. No one refuses to see them and they stay with their prospect until sold.

With each folder we send a letter setting forth three reasons why the folder is being sent to that particular person. In every instance our mailing list includes persons and businesses within a certain radius of the property being offered.

These folders are also used to advantage in the industrial field. Included in this is specific information about values of various types of property, prevailing rental and sales prices of property, and pictures of the property offered. Also included is information about Memphis that is needed when considering a plant investment — rate of growth, labor market, power cost, insurance rates, taxes, freight rates.

Perhaps one of the most important factors for our continuing to obtain management business not personally solicited is the type of records we keep on each property. These records not only help to

WITH building costs running from $10 to $12 per square foot, every inch of space must count in today's houses. The builders of this house utilized space with such success that you don't realize at first how small the house really is — 750 square feet.

The four rooms not only look bigger, they are bigger than they would have been with less meticulous planning. The secret is a combination of things. Leaving out partitions, placing windows effectively — all are part of it. But mostly it's a matter of carefully planned storage space.

About 100 of the 750 square feet were used for storage space — an unusually large ratio. Walls do double duty as closets, and every nook that would hold a cabinet or a shelf was neatly utilized.

There's a lesson here for operative builders. If you want to increase the living space in small homes you build for sale, don't try to increase it by cutting down on storage area. If anything, add more; but plan to put it under sinks and lavatories, in well-placed counters and cabinets. Most important of all, put walls to work. Plan them to provide cabinets and closets.

Attractive counters with maximum use of storage space is part of this house's secret. Glass cupboard fills space above

Can We Make a Fair Long-Term Lease?

By J. F. BROWNLOW, Realtor
Knoxville, Tennessee

Economic ups and downs make the fixed rental of a good business property unfair to tenant and owner, says the author. But what type of long-term lease is fair? He challenges the straight percentage and other widely-used solutions and suggests a different type, fairer to both parties

THE solution to making a fair long-term lease appears to fall into the same category as that of squaring a circle or tri-secting an angle.

If by "long-term lease" it is meant that the term is unalterably fixed and the rental determined in a specific and ascertainable manner, I do not believe there is a solution which will maintain a fair balance between landlord and tenant. However, I do think that the circumstances which create the problem can be manipulated to arrive at a satisfactory lease in the great majority of cases.

How long is a long-term lease? McMichael, whose books on leasing have been THE authority for more than 30 years, says, "50 years or longer."

Some months ago a realtor asked for a solution of this problem in a real estate publication and eleven daring souls subsequently replied.

One suggested just making a long-term percentage lease. The objection here is that the best mercantile tenants do, sometimes, lose their magic touch. It is surprising to go back 25 years and see how many of the nation's then-most-successful chains have fallen by the wayside.

Another suggested having the rental vary with building costs, which means that the tenant would be paying much more rent now than he did in 1945 although, in the average city, his volume of business has fallen off.

The third wanted rental based on periodic valuations of the real estate. This is merely an indirect, and not so accurate, variation of the old arbitrated lease, popular in the first two decades of this century. Those leases gave universal dissatisfaction because the rent was almost invariably fixed by the side which controlled the umpire. I haven't heard of one of these being made in 20 years, though the odor from the old ones, still in effect, lingers on.

Six solutions based changing rentals on the ups and downs of some commodity index — usually that of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The fallacy becomes apparent if we try to apply the idea. Let us mentally make a number of these leases in 20 cities scattered from Maine to California and from Washington state to Florida. We have them all start at exactly the same rent for the first period. Commodity indices are national in scope, so, as the succeeding periods come up, every one of these rents change exactly the same, upward or downward, and all remain the same regardless of local and national business conditions. Does anyone know of any two cities where the percentage changes in rental values have remained the same over any extended period of time? Or, to make it easier, does anyone know of two separated locations in the same city where there has been no change in relative values? This reductio ad absurdum seems to be a sufficient answer to the use of this type lease.

A few commodity index leases were made on the Pacific Coast in the late 1930's. One wonders how the landlords felt when the government, through price controls, froze commodity prices and the owners were not getting the increases that percentage leases were paying during the lush war years.

It has been announced that the government is now preparing to change the basis for its cost-of-living index. This will introduce another complication in calculating rent commodity index leases.

The two remaining answers suggested a combination of the percentage commodity index types and merely seem to complicate the disadvantage of both.

To get at an even partially satisfactory answer we must approach the subject not from the standpoint of the form of lease but from that of the use to which the lease, any lease, is to be put. We assume that there is no necessity for a long term where cheap property to a low-rent tenant is involved.

This leaves us with the following types of property:

1.) The 85 to 100% retail district, the type of location sought by chains and the best of the local merchants, in single buildings with 20- to 25-foot frontage. Ten years is usually as long as is necessary under a percentage. This is the kind of property that is in demand. Either the tenant or landlord may have to make a sizable investment in a new front, light fixtures, air conditioning, and similar items which will be obsolete or worn out at the end of 10 years and the party who pays can recapture the cost through a modification of the percentage rate.

2.) The outlying location with an expensive, specialized building, large in size, on relatively cheap ground. This is usually built for a department store and frequently handled under the modern lease-buy arrangement. The details are all worked out by the tenant and the broker's problem is not one of getting a tenant but of finding a purchaser for an income over a 40- to 60-year period.

3.) We now come to the very tough residue not included above. This includes all special-purpose buildings on high value land which require erection of new buildings and frequently the destruction of sound improvements. Tenants for this type of occupancy are usually department stores, theatres, parking garages, variety stores and large furniture stores. Usually both landlord and tenant will insist on a long-term lease. Even if the tenant paid for the new building the landlord will not want to be left at the end of a short lease with a building that can't be inexpensively converted to other uses.

The tenants of all of these types are in a peculiarly vulnerable position upon lease termination. The average chain store tenant in the 80 to 100% district can, if it can't reach a satisfactory renewal arrangement, find another location—there are many similar ones. If none is available, it won't ruin it to close one store. Not so with the large department store, the triple front variety store, or the many-storied furniture store.

The only way that I can see to handle the situation will be through a long-term percentage lease with both sides having a cancellation, buy-out privilege beginning at the end of 10 or 15 years and, thereafter, at the end of every succeeding five years. Set up a penalty for each year the lease is shortened and reduce this to its cash value as of date of termination. Add to this the unamortized cost of the building to go to who paid for the building if the cancellation is against the side which put up the money. If both sides contributed, then make the proper split. Require two or three years' notice of the intention to terminate.

Such a lease does not protect either side from being hurt. It does, however, limit extent of injury.

The tenant can buy out if (a) the business meets with such success that he must expand and it is impossible to do so in the location, (b) volume drops off for any reason such as a shift in purchasing traffic, increased competition or deterioration of management. He is protected, to a degree, against arbitrary action of the landlord in putting him out to make way for a new tenant by the monetary penalty imposed.

The landlord is protected against the contemplation of his children and grandchildren having to put up with low rent for a long term.

For 20 years, we have had such a cancellation provision in a number of short-term percentage leases. We have never actually cancelled a lease, but we have threatened to do so with the result that the tenant has improved his operational methods and brought his rental up to what it should be.

In shorter term leases some protection can be given the landlord by putting step-ups in the minimum guarantee. We will encounter resistance to this in a long-time lease. Many people believe we will run into a bad period of deflation.

The toughest situation will arise where a large building is to be erected on land owned by more than one landlord. Probably a majority of the country's largest department stores, where the land is not owned by the occupant, were erected under long-term, net leases from several landlords. Some have arbitration clauses and others mild—entirely too mild—step-ups in the fixed rentals. Obviously, no one landlord can be given the right of cancellation. Such a right must be indivisible. Could this right be pooled, with a majority of the land ownership determining not only the right to cancel but the right to renegotiate for each period? We don't know. We have never tried it.

Assuming that all of these obstacles have been surmounted there will remain a number of loose ends to be taken care of. In case of cancellation what happens to the building? Take a six- or seven-story department store erected on a 225-foot frontage. Two lots are 100 feet each and one is 25 feet. The two large lot owners can remodel and use their portions of the building. But in the 90-100% district of a small or medium size city, a six-story building on a 25-foot lot has no value above the second floor except to the tax assessor and the insurance agent. Supporting columns or large reinforced concrete piers will not follow property lines and a small corner lot will have a front occupied to a great extent by a door and a large pier with very little room for a show window.

Having now maneuvered myself to where I have the ball on fourth down on my own one-foot line I will let you, a better quarterback, take over.

modernization of a board office

SALES by members had jumped from $9 million in 1950 to more than $21 million in 1951. There was a desperate need for more space to house the increasing number of services the Board was performing. And they wanted to impress the public with the stability and progressiveness of their organization. For the answer, the San Fernando Real Estate Board recently completed modernizing its offices and adding a $20,000 wing.

The new wing, modern in exterior and interior in the California tradition of design, provides an office for the secretary-treasurer, T. R. White, a reception room for both Board and multiple listing services, and a board of directors' conference room.

The original building was modernized into an office for multiple listing records, a mechanical department where information is mimeographed for members, and a small reference library with office facilities for members. A new front of brick with redwood trellis above was added to tie in with the new wing.

Exterior walls of the wing are of masonry and redwood paneling. A unique feature is a majestic fir tree which rises through the roof overhanging the entrance. To provide comfortable temperatures, each room of the building is equipped with individual heating and cooling controls.

Interior walls are decorated in restful shades of blues, tans, and greys, with a different color on each wall. Blocks of harmonizing linoleum are laid so that the predominant color in the reception room carries over into half of the secretary's office.

Floor-to-ceiling windows in the secretary's office and room-length windows in the directors' room give a pleasant view of a landscaped patio which adjoins both rooms. The 14 x 22-foot directors' room, furnished with a large conference table, comfortable leather chairs, and deep-piled rug, is also equipped with a snack bar for use of officers, employees, and civic group. A combination stove and refrigerator of the type used on Pan-American clippers, along with a small pantry, dishes, and cooking utensils make preparation of light lunches convenient.

Meetings of the 15 directors are held twice monthly. When not in use by them, the room is available for gatherings of small civic organizations.

"We wish to impress the people of our community with the stability and progressiveness of our organization," says Secretary White. "We want to make our office a community center, so we encourage use of our facilities by those groups who are promoting the welfare of the area we serve."

Progressiveness is evident both in the modern decor of the offices and the activity which takes place within them. Bulletins which give

Secretary-treasurer's office has floor-to-ceiling windows which give view of patio. Note panelling, two-tone flooring sales and general information are issued twice weekly. A production report of total sales is sent out monthly.

Multiple listings containing a photo, complete description of property, outstanding selling points, and pertinent comments by the lister, are distributed weekly. To obtain each week's listings, members must be present at the regular Friday morning board meeting.

Another valuable service for members is the Board's library of real estate reference material and the complete index of property sold in the Valley.

The Board's next goal is to add an auditorium to the present building for meetings of the Board and other civic groups.

Exchanging Real Estate

Taxes have reached such proportions and dollar value sunken to such depths that exchanging has become an increasingly wise and popular practice. Handled adroitly, the exchange avoids capital gains tax and increases spendable income. The author, an exchange expert, points out the steps to take, the pitfalls to avoid, in this type of transaction

By BRUCE McCOLLUM, Realtor
Oakland, California

MILLIONS of dollars are being made in real estate transactions throughout the country on which not a dime is being paid to Uncle Sam in capital gains tax. Some astute individuals have pyramided a small property into a really worthwhile holding worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

These alert owners who have so spectacularly accumulated great wealth would certainly have been "slowed" if they had paid a tax every time they sold a property at a profit.

When I described the fabulous accomplishments of one client of mine, a friend snorted, "You can't fool me, that's impossible."

It is possible however and it is being done with the full knowledge and consent of the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue.

What is this ingenious legal method which permits an owner of real estate to "eat his cake and have it too?" It is the real estate exchange.

Because of existing economic conditions, ever increasing tax rates, the loss in purchasing power of the dollar with the resulting elevation of the price level of real estate, exchanging as a method of selling and purchasing real estate is rapidly gaining momentum as the method to be preferred. The real estate broker who is to render a professional service in guiding his clients to invest wisely must be informed on exchanging.

The Tax Angle

A brief discussion at this point on tax-saving methods and on "spendable income" may be helpful. It should be born in mind that an exchange for real estate of equal or greater value merely postpones the payment of federal tax until such time as the property is sold or disposed of in an otherwise taxable transaction.

Federal law, as interpreted by the San Francisco Office of the Internal Revenue Bureau, does not even give the taxpayer the privilege of paying a tax on an exchange of this type even though the taxpayer realizes that there is a profit advantage to him in the transaction.

If a man owns a piece of investment property for which he paid $100,000 in 1940 and it is now worth $200,000, and he trades it for property which in his opinion is more desirable for his long term ownership, which has been appraised and is reasonably worth $200,000, he pays no tax, providing both properties are clear of encumbrance, or each mortgaged for the same amount. This, notwithstanding the fact that he may actually be realizing a $100,000 profit. The cost of the property which he originally acquired in 1940, less any depreciation which he has taken, plus any improvements he has made to it, or that figure which his accountant describes as "basis," becomes the book cost of the property which he is acquiring.

Thus it is that many an astute investor in real estate has pyramided his holdings by the exchange method without paying capital gains taxes and in some cases now own million dollar properties, the actual value of which may be many times the original investment.

Most brokers will agree that it would be easier to induce owners to enter into transactions if they would not have to face the bug-a-boo of heavy capital gains tax. And, of course, the situation has an obvious appeal for the investor. It must be pointed out, however, that in order to gain the advantages of this fortunate method of postponing tax payment, that transactions must be meticulously handled and here is where the "ifs" and "buts" start.

The tax law points out that under a variety of situations the advantages of an exchange may be nullified. First, an exchange must be for a "like kind," which means that real estate may be traded for real estate. If part of the consideration for the purchase is cash, this is not real estate but personal property just as would be stocks or bonds or automobiles or items of furnishings. If one party to an exchange is receiving personal property, which is usually cash, and which the government describes as "cash boot," gain is taxable to the extent of the cash received.

If in a real estate exchange a man is making a profit of $100,000 and he is receiving, as part of the consideration, $60,000 in cash, he would be required to pay tax on the $60,000. If the transaction is so arranged that one party reduces his mortgage indebtedness, this would be construed the same as though he had received cash. He would be subject to tax on the amount of reduction in his debt, providing that such reduction does not exceed his profit. Whether you receive cash or other personal property or reduce obligations, you are never expected to pay a tax beyond the actual gain achieved. For example, if you reduce mortgage debt $40,000 and the actual appraised profit is $90,000, only the $40,000 (the amount of the debt reduction) is taxed. However, if you reduce debt $40,000 and receive $50,000 in cash, then the entire profit of $90,000 earned in the transaction would be fully taxable. From these observations you will recognize how easy it is to bungle the handling of a transaction that might otherwise be "tax free" so that it becomes partially or fully taxable.

Let's go back to the transaction where an owner is exchanging a property purchased in 1940 for $100,000 and clear of encumbrance for a parcel worth $200,000 today which is also clear of encumbrance. This property is held for investment (or for productive use in trade or business) and the parcel to be acquired is to be held as an investment. If the man who owned the property in 1940 assumed a $50,000 mortgage on the property which he acquired, and received $50,000 in cash to offset the difference in equities, he would be obligated to pay tax at capital gain rates on $50,000 which would amount to some $13,000.

By thoughtful handling, payment of the $13,000 could have been avoided. The $50,000 could have been used to pay off the mortgage. By receiving the property unencumbered and thus foregoing the "cash boot," the "tax free" quality of the transaction would have been preserved. A proposal offering the payment of cash by one person to another, or effecting a reduction in the mortgage obligation should be the hoisting of the warning flag. The alert broker will then study the transaction to see if it is not possible to postpone the payment of tax by adroit handling.

A piece of property worth $100,000 in 1940 and now valued at $200,000 may be exchanged for another property worth $200,000 and no tax paid, providing both properties are clear of encumbrance and each mortgaged for the same amount.

This might be a good time to point out that the advantages of an exchange may sometimes be lost if the property acquired is not held for investment or productive use. To immediately offer for sale a property received may indicate that it was not the intention to acquire the property for investment or for productive use in trade or business. Then the transaction does not meet the requirement for "tax free" exchanging. Conditions need not be met by both parties and a transaction "tax free" to one principal may be taxable to another.

Spendable Income

When property can only be sold at less than its cost, it is sometimes desirable to exchange in order to maintain a high "basis" or book cost because depreciation on improvements is such an important deduction in determining net taxable income. Maintaining a substantial annual depreciation is one of the most important factors in obtaining "spendable income." Spendable income is sometimes and possibly better referred to as income you can keep.

An example of maintaining depreciation and thus acquiring "spendable income" is pointed up in the case of a man owning a palatial residence which stands on his books at more than $200,000. He has had it rented out for a year at $500 a month, which does little more than pay the taxes and insurance. Because of the problems created in maintaining a residence of this consequence, it might not be sold for cash for more than $75,000, $125,000 less than its present depreciated value.

By trading into a larger property this owner maintains much of his initial investment cost. He establishes the figure for his new "basis" by adding this depreciated value, say $200,000 for the example, to the assumed mortgage and to the cash he pays in acquiring the new property. The depreciation which he can take on the property he thus acquires will probably be based on a cost $125,000 greater than if he were to have sold the property for cash. Assuming that there is a remaining 20-year life in the property which he acquires, he has the advantage of $6,250 a year in additional depreciation or "spendable income." He would not have enjoyed this had he sold the house at the $75,000 market price rather than taken advantage of the more prudent method, exchanging.

Tax Saving Analysis

The intelligent and conscientious broker will propose no exchange without first studying the advantages and the disadvantages to the clients concerned. Establishing the highest possible rate of "spendable income," revising the difference in values by rearranging the financing, adding other real estate as a "tax free" substitute for cash will all be considered for their effect on possible tax liability. In demonstrating tax effects realtors must be cautious not to give tax advice. This should be reserved to the client's own attorney.

The Key Issue

While many of the traditional selling techniques are useful in negotiating exchanges, there is one fundamental difference in exchanging which needs to be emphasized. In selling real estate the price is the big thing. Usually it is the principal issue, the hurdle that must be scaled if a sale is to result. This is not true in exchanging.

The first consideration in an exchange must be — what will the transaction accomplish? Will it meet the need of an owner? Will it improve his position? Will it accomplish his purpose?

The brokers who do the largest volume of exchange business all agree that their principal objective is solving problems. Sometimes it is necessary to point out to an owner that price has little to do with the matter. Where he is exchanging one property for another, it is a question of comparable value. Relative income, relative desirability of location, relative merit of the improvements, relative usefulness to the new owner — these are the proper and helpful areas for discussion. It really boils down to one question: What will the transaction do for the client? Does it meet his need? Will it accomplish a purpose?

The desirability of avoiding price quoting may be cleared up by relating the experience of an actual exchange transaction. A candy manufacturer in Northern California owned a residence which he offered for sale for over a year for $25,000. The house had originally been a family home. Unfortunately, the family had split. The house had been rented for a time and had for some months been vacant. The second wife was adamant in her refusal to move into what she termed the "first wife's house."

Most of the real estate brokers in the neighborhood had had a shot at selling the house but no one had accomplished anything because the candy manufacturer stubbornly refused to be realistic in pricing the property. The salesman, who was an exchange specialist, called and asked to borrow the key, told the manufacturer that he thought that he could work out something on the property. This salesman was thoroughly familiar with the house and knew what price it would bring in the market. He carried the key around in his pocket for a day and then went back and announced that he had worked out a way of disposing of the property. The candy manufacturer was elated until he learned that the salesman had in mind an exchange. At this he exploded, "You wasted your time and my time, I won't consider making any exchange."

The salesman waited a moment and then looked him in the eye and said, "You would trade a $10 bill for a $20 bill wouldn't you?"

"That's a ridiculous question. Of course I would," was the response.

"Well that is just what I propose to do. It is costing you $40 a month for taxes on your house and $50 a month for a gardener. There is insurance and water to pay to say nothing of maintenance. You are losing interest which, at 5% on your own price, would be another $100 a month. I am going to show you how you not only can save all this monthly outgo and expense, but can enjoy a substantial amount of monthly income. Better yet, it will be 'spendable income' or maybe you would prefer to say the kind of income you can keep.

"I have worked out an exchange for you where all you need to do is to give this house and assume an easy pay, low interest rate loan on an income property. No cash is required and you will never be asked to make any further payment because there is more than enough income to meet the loan payments and the incidental operating expenses. Because you will be able to transfer the heavy book cost of your house to this other property, you will be able to take depreciation in a substantial amount. It will not be long before this income, which is tax free to you, will more than offset the price you had hoped to obtain for your house."

"How much mortgage do I have to assume?" the candy man inquired.

"The amount of the mortgage, which incidentally is only $20,000, is outlined in this brief which I have prepared especially for you. It shows a plot of the property, a photograph, and tells you everything that you would need to know about it, as much as you would know if you were standing in front of the property."

The candy man responded that he wanted to personally inspect any property that he was to acquire. He couldn't do it that afternoon but would look at it on his way home and made an appointment to meet the salesman the following day.

By appointment at 10 o'clock the following morning, the salesman arrived with an Exchange Agreement, carefully and accurately prepared, tucked away in his pocket. He was hardly prepared for the blistering reception which he encountered with a voice that could be heard over the factory. The candy manufacturer wanted to know if he was trying to steal his house.

"Why," said he, "I found out that that property can be bought for $35,000. You were only allowing me $15,000 for my house."

"May I point out to you one thing," said the salesman, "You and I have never discussed a price. Whether the property can be purchased for $35,000 or whether your information is inaccurate has nothing whatsoever to do with the matter. The whole issue is what this transaction accomplishes for you."

With that he pulled out the Exchange Agreement, put his fountain pen into the candy manufacturer's hand saying, "Will you look this over and see that it is right?"

Still blustering and muttering under his breath, but apparently somewhat mollified, the manufacturer, pen in hand, started to read the Agreement. When he got to the last line, the line marked with a big X he got up from his desk with the contract in his hand, walked over to the window and saying absolutely nothing stood peering out for what seemed to the salesman a long time. He then walked back to the desk and signed the agreement and then again in a stentorian voice said, "I just wanted you to know that you're not putting anything over on me, I know exactly what you are doing."

The Exchange was closed and six months went by. One day the office door opened and here was the candy manufacturer. Said he, "I thought you were entitled to know that that deal worked out all right. The lease on the rooms on the second floor is expiring next month and I would like you to tell me what I should do about it."

The salesman suggested that he should employ a manager, refurbish all rooms and rent them out and thus obtain a very substantial increase in earning.

A year went by. The candy manufacturer again called at the office. "Well," said he, "I've retired."

The salesman said, "I know that there has been a rapid increase in income in the type of property you acquired but don't tell me that you retired on the strength of the deal we made."

"No, of course not," was the rejoinder. "But it did advance my retirement by five years. That income, plus my earnings from the stock in the firm and the annuity on my life insurance policy enables me to get along very nicely. Possibly in fairness to you I should also add the saving in not having to support that old house."

Realtor A. I. Turner demonstrates one of the country's first San Angelo Plan $3,000 houses

a private enterprise answer to public housing

A 600-square-foot, two bedroom house selling for $3,000 with 10 years to pay at lower payments than rent may cast shadows on the public housers and send them scurrying back into their burrows.

This low-cost, frame and masonry constructed house was developed in San Angelo, Texas, by Realtor A. L. Turner and John Moss, lumber company accountant. Their San Angelo Plan was created for three basic reasons: 1) To provide permanent modern houses for low income groups. 2) To show that private industry can provide housing at lower cost than the government and still make a profit. 3) To provide an economical solution for housing in critical defense areas.

After six months of research on the basic plan, Turner and Moss built the first pilot house in 15 working days. They kept detailed material and labor records and proved to themselves they could sell the house for $3,000 exclusive of land costs and still realize the customary builder's profit. The use of two solid masonry walls without openings is their biggest cost-cutter. Other factors are modular coordination and use of stock doors and windows.

On opening day 1,000 people inspected the pilot house and the demand was so great that the builders started plans for a 50-house subdivision and added a third partner, John Armstrong, lumberman, to the already formed T & M De-

You can't legislate away the evils of socialized housing. . . . You must offer an alternative solution that will completely eliminate them. The San Angelo Plan may be that solution. It's a $3,000 house . . . the product of imagination, hard work, and a desire to prove that private business can supply housing for defense areas and low income groups velopment Company. Today the homes are springing up in more than 40 towns throughout Texas and neighboring states.

Texas' junior senator, Lyndon B. Johnson, who flew to San Angelo to inspect the first pilot house, comments, "This remarkable home would save the taxpayers millions of dollars if built in military areas instead of the present Federal Authority houses, which cost the taxpayers from $9,000 to $15,000 each."

The creators of the plan believe the house can be built in colder climates with few minor changes and for little added cost. They have prepared complete working kits for the use of other builders. The kits contain sets of plans and specifications, bills of materials, information on ways to finance locally, time and motion studies for each labor operation, assembly data, and merchandising information.

Texas realtors, builders, and architects say the house is attractively and efficiently designed in spite of its low cost.

Four main objectives were kept in mind in planning the house: purpose of the rooms, traffic, permanence, and beauty. The basic San Angelo Plan home is styled in a contemporary manner, including a flat roof, living room window wall, and other modern features. The designers claim the house offers maximum comfort and livability at minimum cost.

Overall dimensions of the basic house are 25 x 26 feet. Front and rear walls are frame constructed and can be finished in cedar shakes, asbestos siding, stucco, wood siding, boards and battens, or vertical paneling. Roof overhangs and masonry sidewings help protect front and rear walls from the weather.

Exterior side walls are solid masonry constructed and have no openings. They are engineered on a modular basis to eliminate cutting of masonry units. Brick, stone, or building tile can be used for these walls. The masonry sidewings are extensions of the side walls. The reinforced concrete floating slab floor extends in the front and rear the same distance as the sidewings forming a narrow porch in the front and a ledge in the rear.

The flat deck roof of the pilot house is covered with Johns-Manville 90-pound slate asphalt roll roofing mopped on a layer of 30-pound felt. Edges are protected with galvanized metal edging.

Door jambs and window units are also engineered to reduce cost. Standard stock sash and fir slab doors are used throughout. The window wall in front is constructed of Libbey-Owens-Ford double strength window glass set in 2 x 6-inch frames.

The main living area consists of a 24' 8" x 9' 6" room across the front of the house. Across one end of the room are kitchen cabinets, sink, and linoleum-topped counters. Spaces for stove and refrigerator are conveniently left at the sides. The center of the room can be used for dining and the other end for a living area. The kitchen can be hidden from view by a folding screen.

Both bedrooms are 9' 4" x 12' and have enough space for two twin beds or one double bed, together with other bedroom furniture. As many as four children can be accommodated in each bedroom by using double bunks.

The bathroom is accessible from both bedrooms, thus eliminating a hall. It is 5' x 6' 4" and contains full-size Briggs tub, water closet, and lavatory plus linen closet and medicine cabinet. Masonite wainscot protects walls around the bathroom fixtures.

A large 5' x 5' 5" closet is also accessible from both bedrooms. It can be arranged with two rods as a walk-in type with shelf space above, or three rods can be used giving 15 lineal feet of hanging space — the equivalent of three closets — plus 27½ square feet of shelf area above the rods.

The house is equipped with electrical fixtures, four butane or natural gas jets for heating, and a 20-gallon hot water heater. Floors are completely covered with asphalt Kentile, thereby eliminating the need for rugs or carpets. Gypsum wall board is used on inside walls and ceilings and the masonry walls are left exposed or painted to match other decorations.

The frame walls of the pilot house have a 15-pound vapor barrier applied to the studs under the siding. The walls aren't insulated, but for northern climates it is estimated this could be done for about $32 extra.

The space between the flat roof deck and ceiling is cross-ventilated to keep a fresh layer of air between each pair of ceiling joists. This provides a cooler ceiling than in the average modern house having a low-pitch ridge roof with louvers in each gable. In climates with greater heating problems a two-inch layer of insulation should be put in the ceiling beneath the air holes. Estimated extra cost for this is about $50.

Interior walls between rooms are of standard frame construction and are covered with one-half-inch gypsum board. All joints are taped, floated with joint cement, and covered with wallpaper that harmonizes with the overall color scheme. The house is completely built, painted, and decorated by union labor.

The Texas trio is constructing the homes under two financing plans, both on a 10-year conventional loan basis. Under one plan, the owner furnishes the lot and the builders construct the $3,000 house in 15 working days. Under the other, the builders sell house and lot together. They are currently building on lots varying from 40 x 90 feet to 50 x 90 feet. Selling price of house and lot is $3,500.

Downpayment for a house with the lot included is $650. If the lot is already owned, the downpayment is $300.

The San Angelo Federal Savings and Loan Association is making the first mortgage on the houses at 6% interest in the amount of $2,200 — about 63% of the average cost of house and land. The $650 downpayment required when the buyer doesn't own the lot leaves $650 of the total cost to be financed on a second mortgage, which is retained by the builders. If the borrower has his own lot, the second mortgage is for $500—roughly the builder's profit. The San Angelo Federal is collecting payments on the second mortgage as well as the payments on its own mortgage.

Payments on the $2,200 first mortgage are approximately $31.40 per month including principal, insurance, taxes, and interest. The second mortgage, also written at 6%, is repaid at the rate of $15 per month plus interest. Thus, in the first three or four years of the loan, the borrower's cost is less than $50 per month, and during the remaining life of the loan, the payments drop to $31.40.

The Fort Worth district of the FHA carefully checked the house and approved all methods of construction for Title I, Section 8, mortgage insurance with the exception of the construction methods used on the floor slab and foundation. The details they require would probably increase the cost $150. These details are included in the working drawings as alternate construction methods which would meet FHA approval.

Large room across front of house has kitchen facilities in one end, dining space in the center, and living area across the other end. Folding screen blocks kitchen from view

What's Happening to the Mortgage Market?

Was it wise to unpeg the bond market last year? What chance is there for the much-talked-about hike in VA and FHA interest rates? How are long-term commitments being digested? Will the government increase rates on savings bonds? The author offers his opinions and explains why he believes the mortgage market will improve in '52

By HOWARD J. LUDINGTON, *President**
H. J. Ludington, Inc.
Buffalo and Rochester, New York

OPERATING amid the vicissitudes of a controlled economy has made life anything but dull in the mortgage banking field for several years, but 1952 seems to be the blue ribbon year for problematical prognostications and universal uncertainties.

One government official says 600,000 houses will be plenty for 1952 — another predicts at least 800,000. Building trade representatives claim a demand for another million-house year and see no reason to leave the demand unfilled.

An increase in VA and FHA interest rates is demanded in loud voice by some groups while federal officials cling steadfastly to present rates. Theories of all kinds have been advanced with reckless abandon throughout the first three months of this year, but as we turn the quarter there appears to be emerging something of a solid pattern.

In the first place, the easing of material shortages indicates that there can be at least 800,000 house starts this year with the possibility of close to a million. Undoubtedly there is demand for at least a million homes a year for several years to come.

The mortgage market is reaching a semblance of stability. The unpegging of the bond market in March, 1951, contributed to a dislocation that was widespread and painful. However, there must be few if any in the mortgage field who fail to recognize the Federal Reserve decision to withdraw support as a sound move and one of the best steps toward a free market in many years.

The insistence of the Treasury Department that the Reserve support the price of government securities in order to keep the interest rates down was an unsound practice that contributed in major part to post-war inflation.

The real cause of all inflation is too much money and the "cheap money" policy of the Treasury helped to feed the fires.

The policy change of March, 1951, restored to the Reserve some measure of its right to control the national money supply — one of the fundamental reasons for which the Reserve was created.

Incidentally, the performance of the bond market since the unpegging seems to have satisfied the fiscal and monetary experts in Washington and there is no indication of any further policy changes in the making.

Since March of last year lending institutions have been reluctant to sell government bonds below par in order to make large-scale mortgage commitments. This, of course, has had a drastic effect on the market for mortgages and caused a shortage of mortgage funds in some parts of the country during the last half of 1951 and the first quarter of 1952.

The market is improving however, and will continue to improve, in our opinion, during the balance of 1952.

In addition to the change in government bond policy there has been another important factor influencing the mortgage market during the past year. Many lending institutions made unprecedentedly large long-term commitments during 1949 and 1950 and these were being digested during 1951.

This digestion is nearing completion and the lenders are beginning to look around. Some may be waiting to see if FHA and VA interest rates will rise. In our opinion this is highly unlikely.

A few lenders may be marking time until the Treasury Department announces its policy on new issues of savings bonds — perhaps expecting that these will be "sweetened" somewhat.

Here again, we believe they are waiting in vain. The Treasury realizes that the small investor buying savings bonds is influenced very little by the rate. Large investors would, of course, be interested, but the Treasury theorizes, and correctly so in our opinion, that competitive securities would move simultaneously with governments and defeat the purpose of any interest rise.

*Mr. Ludington, a pioneer in the marketing of FHA mortgages, has been active in the mortgage field on a nation-wide basis for many years. His company is one of the nation's leading mortgage banking firms.

What about VA and FHA interest rates? Are they "effective?" At first blush the answer would seem to be "No," and certainly things would move much faster if the rates were more flexible.

However, it is apparent that no increase is contemplated and in the case of FHA the authorities have a rather solid argument. FHA applications nationally are increasing in volume and the amount of business FHA is now doing satisfies its officials that the current rate is "effective." It is difficult to convince anyone who is doing a good business that he isn't charging enough for his merchandise.

In our opinion, investors will buy FHA mortgages this year. Despite the lure of higher interest rates on conventional loans, the insurance feature is of vital importance to bankers when they consider the inflation that is behind the real estate market. In most sections of the country, we believe, FHA mortgages will demand a premium throughout the remainder of 1952.

The VA interest rate is a horse of another color. It is too low, in our opinion, but here again there is no indication of a proposed increase. VA is also doing a substantial volume but this is due to large discounts now being taken.

Recent approval by VA of a method of warehousing mortgages by builders with substantial discounts made possible will activate the market so investors will buy. This is not sound practice, in our opinion, as it is difficult to believe that such discounts are ultimately paid for by any one other than the veteran.

For several months, new money has been accumulating in savings banks, insurance companies, and savings and loan associations in the form of savings deposits, premium payments on insurance policies, and amortization payments on mortgages outstanding. It is estimated that the mutual savings banks alone have to invest more than $800 million annually to prevent portfolios from declining.

An indication of how the money supply has changed is that during the third quarter of 1951 the public added $5.7 billion to "liquid savings" whereas during the like period of 1950 they added only $800 million. Deposits in the nation's 529 mutual savings banks increased $126 million in January, 1952, bringing total deposits to $21,027 million, the highest in history. The funds will be available to finance the building and real estate markets for 1952 and in our opinion, FHA and VA mortgages will find adequate outlets at effective prices.

REAL ESTATE TRENDS

Income property sales are booming. And right along with them the need for professional property management services

IN one of the biggest buying spurts in history, investors are rushing to buy income-producing real estate. Veteran real estate men say there are three reasons:

1) Small investors aren't satisfied with a 3% or 4% return on securities. They can get 8, 10, 12% and sometimes a higher return by buying an office building, store, hotel, or apartment building.

2) Investors are realizing more and more that real estate is a good hedge against inflation.

3) Prices, although high, don't represent the true value — cost of replacement.

There are drawbacks, too, but they don't seem to be stemming the tide, realtors say. Lack of liquidity is the No. 1 disadvantage, but as one veteran realtor explains: "Many investors want to buy a property and stick with it." In real estate circles, there is a general belief that even within a depression, buyers still will get enough return to pay the interest on the mortgage. And there's less of the shoe-string operator today. Most buyers are plunking down 30% to 40%; others are paying cash in full.

The trend is not confined to one particular city or area. On the contrary, there is such a competition to find properties for buyers that some realtors report they are having to go outside their cities in the search.

Although much of the buying is being done by individuals, mostly professional people and small business men, syndicates are contributing to the spree. Attorneys and real estate men are buying the income properties, then selling certificates to individuals for $1,000, $5,000 and up. These cooperative ownership plans are usually on a long-term investment basis.

Small businessmen are attracted to the syndicate plan because it gives them an opportunity to build income outside of their own personal businesses. They can invest in higher-priced properties they wouldn't be able to buy individually. And the syndicate manager is usually in a better position to locate and analyze real estate.

In the syndicate plan, dividends usually are paid to members on a quarterly basis. When the property is sold, a fair return (usually 6% to 10%) is paid on the money invested. The sponsor deducts a small percentage of the profit for his services, and the balance is distributed among the investors.

With the buying rush, more speculators are dipping into the market, buying a property and holding it for six months or longer to take advantage of the capital gains tax, and then selling it. Some of these speculators are realizing 100% return on their less-than-a-year investments.

More conservative real estate investors, satisfied with a 5% or 6% return, are buying property with chain store tenants holding a 10- or 15-year lease.

The buying spurt is creating more demand for qualified property management. Henry G. Beaumont, president of NAREB's Institute of Real Estate Management, says professional management business is growing at an unprecedented pace. On checks he made traveling around the country, Beaumont says he found management portfolios up 10-15% for 1951 over 1950. He believes the trend will continue, upping portfolios another 10-25% by the end of this year.

What Kind of a Selling Job are We Doing?

Above all else, your most important selling job is convincing people that you have the ability to serve. And how do you shape that opinion? It starts in your own office, selling your people on knowing what they're doing and looking like they know. And it continues into your dealings with others in the real estate profession and what you contribute to your community. Create the right point of view

DID you ever stop to think that the job of selling we've got to do is not necessarily and primarily the job of putting the names of the buyer and seller on the dotted line? The job of selling most of us should be doing is the very important job of selling the people in our own business on the importance of knowing what we are doing — and looking like we know!

A good real estate man operates on what we like to call a "professional level." So, if we are going to think of ourselves as professional people, we are going to have to sell a lot of folks on what it is we do that makes us professional.

For a number of years all of us have been trying to take care of more business than we can properly handle—and we've been overlooking the fact that a lot of people are watching us with mixed emotions. A radio writer recently defined mixed emotions as something like when you see your mother-in-law is about to drive over a high mountain cliff — in your new Cadillac.

Nevertheless, it is a fact that lots of folks do have mixed emotions about us. They are beginning to ask each other, "What is it that real estate men do — or know — that enables them to look so prosperous? Most of them have nice homes, drive good cars, send their youngsters to the right schools. What kind of a business is this real estate business?"

People are asking questions like that. People ask questions like that about any successful business man. It is a common characteristic of humanity that people admire the quality of success, but individually they look askance at prosperous people, especially if being prosperous is the only attribute that shows.

Now, before anyone gets the wrong impression of what we're trying to say here, let's get the idea compressed into a sentence or two. It is simply this: We, as real estate people, must make certain that other folks recognize three things about us. First, that we are informed individuals, and know what we are doing. Second, that our place in business is an important part of the community. Third, that we are not only willing, but do put back into our community at least as much as we take out of it.

The thing we must accomplish is to see that the people around us get the proper point of view. This is extremely important because point of view is often the influencing factor in forming an opinion. For instance, some years ago a Chinese was sent over here on a mission of some sort, and when he returned to China he was queried as to what he thought was the most unusual thing about the Americans. He replied that the most unusual thing he noticed was the peculiar slant of our eyes! His opinion was based entirely on point of view.

What are we doing to establish "point of view" in order to make people think we know what we are doing? Let's take an imaginary trip with Mr. Ferguson and his wife, who are about to buy a home. Let's see what we do to their point of view.

We'll start with our entrance into a certain real estate office where Mr. Ferguson has an appointment. The street windows are a little dirty, and there is a poster on one side that shows Clark Gable is playing at the Bijou this week. (Why spend money for tickets when you can get passes for just a little window space?) There are a couple of signs — printed with a rubber stamp. One of them says, 5 RM BUNG 8000. The other says, CTG — 3 PC BATH — LOW DN. (We find later that CTG means cottage.)

Let's go inside — it must be better in there. A girl is talking on the telephone. A sign on her desk reads, INFORMATION. She says to the person on the other end of the line, "No, I don't know anything about it. Mr. Thaw handles it, but I don't know where he is just now. Why don't you call back later?" She hangs up, and the phone rings almost immediately. "Ding-Dong Realty Company," she says. "Gee, ma'am, I don't know. The salesman who handles that house isn't here now. Yes ma'am, we are supposed to have a salesman on the floor, but he's over at the drug store having his coffee. Yes ma'am." She hangs up.

I'm not going to kick this telephone problem around, because we all know how important it is to have the proper telephone personnel, and to have salesmen available to take the calls. We could fill this fine magazine with paragraphs on how to improve our telephone relationship with the public. It is quite important to remember that in the real estate business, opportunity seldom knocks. It has been said that in the real estate business, opportunity is more apt to ring a phone — and ask a silly question.

Let's get back to the desk, where the sign says INFORMATION. "Is Mr. Jones in?" we inquire. "Mr. Ferguson here has a 10:30 appointment with him." The young lady replies, "No, Jonesy hasn't come in yet this morning. He ought to be along pretty soon, though. He nearly always comes in before he goes out to lunch. Would you like to sit down and wait?"

Of course we wouldn't like to sit down and wait! But we do. And, about 45 minutes later, in comes our friend, Jonesy. I don't know why we say our friend, Jonesy. We've only met him once before, when we dropped in with the Fergusons to ask about the property on Mill Lane.

Jonesy told us then what the price was, and suggested we drive out and look at it. "Just go up and knock on the door," Jonesy said, "the people who own it live in it. They'll be glad to show you through."

So we drove out and looked at the house. The Fergusons liked it. They liked the people who owned it. As owners, they told us all about it. They even volunteered to call Jonesy's office and see if we could set up an appointment at 10:30 next morning so we could talk about it. The office said Jonesy wasn't in, but they would call Jonesy's wife and she would be sure to tell him to meet us at 10:30.

Well, anyway, now it is next morning, and it is not 10:30. It is 11:15, and here comes Jonesy. Let's take a close look at him. He's a little on the heavy side. It's a warm morning, so he's wearing no coat. The points of his collar are turning up toward his chin, and his tired tie isn't trying very hard to cover up a badly soiled shirt that is easily into its third day. His shirt is half out of his pants — he wears his belt line like the cowboys do, considerably under and past center. You might say he is a bit sloppy — it would be kinder to say his appearance is a bit fatigued. No matter what, you get the idea that he looks something like an unmade bed.

"Well," he says, just like he was getting ready to do us a great big favor, "I see you waited for me." No apologies, no explanation—that wouldn't be like our Jonesy. The importance of punctuality doesn't mean anything to him. He probably figures there's no use in arriving anywhere on time because no one else would be there to appreciate it. And why apologize? The longer people have to wait for you, the more important they will think you are.

Jonesy isn't aware of how many other people worried about him being late for his appointment. First of all, there was Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson. They worried — they did, before they began to get mad about it. Mr. Ferguson was afraid, at first, that something had happened to Jonesy. After awhile, and because he was a very busy man, Mr. Ferguson began to hope that maybe something had! Then there was the girl at the desk with the sign that said INFORMATION. She had to sit there and watch Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, while the Fergusons watched her.

Well, Jonesy gets us back to a desk and we sit down. "So you liked the house," he says. "Did you bring some money with you?" (Give him credit for that. He at least didn't waste any time asking them to buy.)

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Ferguson says, "we did like the house, and we may be interested. But first, we want to find out a few things about this house. The basement smells a bit damp. Do you suppose that basement might get wet from time to time?"

"Oh, no," says Jonesy, "that's a dry basement. Absolutely. You can be sure of that."

"What about the heating plant? Looks a bit small to do an efficient job of heating all that house."

"Have no fear," says Jonesy, "that's a very efficient heating plant. You won't have any trouble keeping warm with that."

"We were just wondering," says Mr. Ferguson. "Now how about the cost of using that furnace? Do you know how much the fuel bills have been running?"

"I'm sure it's very reasonable," says Jonesy.

"But do you know how much?" asks Mr. Ferguson.

"Well . . . no," says Jonesy.

"How about taxes? How much a year?"

"Somewhere around $180." Jonesy would guess.

"Do you know exactly? Have you checked with the tax office?"

"Well . . . no. Not yet."

"Is there a penalty to pay off the present loan? The owners say they owe about $4500, and we would be interested in assuming that loan. However, we do expect some money this fall and we might want to pay it off then. Would there be a penalty if we should want to do that?"

Jonesy reckoned as to how he hadn't got the loan information quite as complete as that.

There's no use going on and on with this — but see what Jonesy was doing? Is the basement wet? Does the furnace heat efficiently? Jonesy had certain, positive answers to those questions. But how could he tell whether the basement would get wet or not? He had never been in the house in his life before the first of last month, and there hadn't been a drop of rain since then. How about "efficient" heat? At our house the heat is plenty efficient at 70, but we have been in homes where everyone wears coats and shawls until the temperature gets to about 82. How did Jonesy know what Ferguson meant by "efficient heat?"

So long as Jonesy didn't have to know facts and figures, he was absolutely sure about things — especially things he couldn't possibly have known about in the first place. But what happened when he was asked about things he could have been absolutely accurate about? He just didn't know from nothin'. He could have had the definite heating costs. He could have known the taxes for last year — to the penny. But you see, in order to know about these things, he would have had to make an effort. It would have taken a little time. It doesn't take any time to tell people the basement is dry, and the furnace is efficient. It doesn't take any time NOW, but if Jonesy's guess is wrong, it's going to take plenty of time later!

You and I know that all real estate men are not like Jonesy. We just dreamed him up as a composite of real estate men we've known — no one man should be as bad as that.

But there are sloppy, indifferent, uninformed people in this business — people who follow the path of least resistance, and in spite of themselves, make enough to get along. But, do they look or act like professional people? Are they any credit to the real estate business?

We have an old friend in our town who runs a fruit and vegetable stand. He isn't too concerned about his clothes, but he is always clean and neat. If you ask him, "Are these tomatoes good?" he says, "Sort 'em over. Pick out the ones you want." He let's the buyer make the decisions. If Tony were in the real estate business, he would let the buyer decide about the basement and about the furnace.

Tony, who is in my opinion a much better man than Jonesy, doesn't claim to be a professional man — he calls himself a peddler! And so is Jonesy, and all the rest like him! We don't need any Jonesys in our business. I don't remember who said it, but someone in the real estate business made the observation several years ago that the first duty of a good real estate man was to improve the breed!

And the danger about Jonesy lies in each of us being complacent about him, and thinking, "Well, he's not in my office. He's not even in my town. Maybe in other towns, but not where I live." Let me tell a story in that respect.

A fellow was walking down the street in a small town in California one day when an earthquake hit. Everyone was panic stricken — didn't know whether to run, fall down, or what. Confusion reigned — except for one man. He walked over to a doorway and stood in it. He then proclaimed in a loud voice, "I'm from Los Angeles. In Los Angeles we always stand in doorways!" Another man, who had run one way and then turned around and run another way pulled up in front of him and gasped. "That's swell. But I'm from Chicago — what the heck do I do?"

I think you will find that things are about the same in every town.

Up to this point, this discussion has had to do with the things that need watching in our own immediate business. We should cover two other points in conclusion.

What about the job of selling we should do with our competitors? Thanks to real estate organizations and local exchange groups, multiple listing groups, and so forth, we are beginning to look like professional people. We are learning this about our competitors: We should think enough of them — and they should think enough of us — not to be calling names in the market place. Everyone enjoys watching a good family fight, as long as it isn't in his family. If you should have a difference of opinion with another real estate man, sit down with him and talk it over. That's the professional way. All in all, we're pretty fortunate in our business in this respect, because many of us have found that our competitors can easily be our best friends! It's that way too, with doctors, lawyers, and bankers. So let's grade ourselves up to the professional level in dealing with our competitors.

NOW — and in conclusion, how

TAKING title in lieu of foreclosure is a ticklish thing. In fact it is so ticklish that some lawyers will not do it, but insist on going through with a foreclosure. I can't help thinking that this is going a little too far, and that they are influenced subconsciously by the fee that a foreclosure will bring them.

The general principle is that a court will not inquire into the adequacy of a consideration, but this principle is not applied to taking title in lieu of foreclosure. The law aims to protect the mortgagor. It says that the relationship between the mortgagee and the mortgagor is a fiduciary one, that they do not deal at arms length, and that the slightest advantage taken by the mortgagee will be grounds for setting aside the deed. Of course, the trouble comes when there is an advance in values, and this advance may be a phenomenal one. Then the mortgagor goes to a lawyer who goes through the transaction with a fine comb, and woe is you if there is any irregularity.

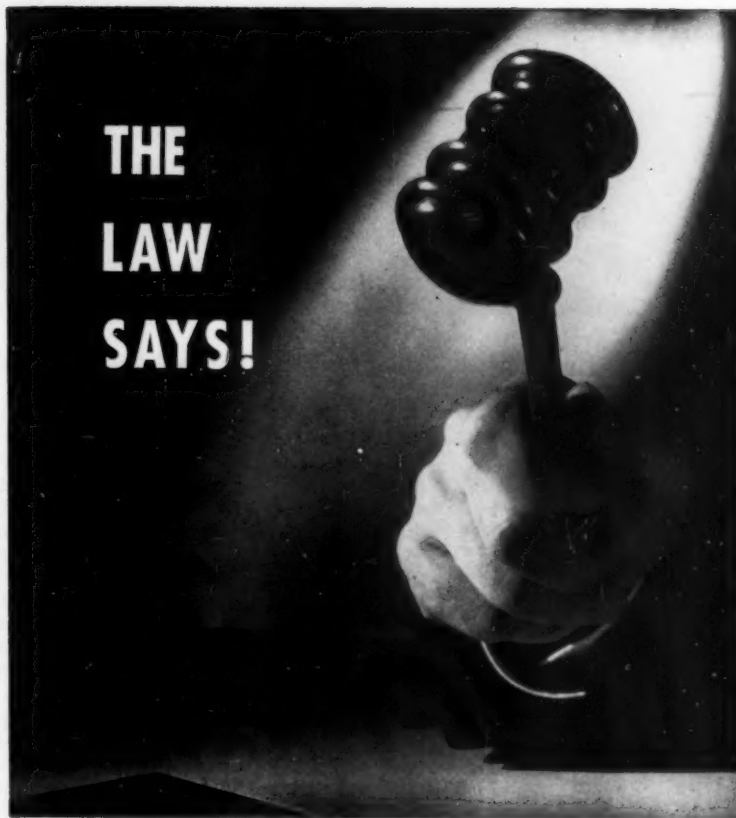

The way to handle a transaction is to pass the buck to the Chicago Title & Trust Co. Lay your transaction before them and ask them if under all the circumstances they will guarantee the title. If they say they will, go ahead. They will give you a form for a Contract Taking Title in Lieu of Foreclosure. It has been drafted by a group of the best real estate lawyers in Illinois.

If you handle the transaction in this manner, you won't have anything to worry about.

AN owner sold his property. When the title was brought down to date it showed a judgement against the owner for $937.60 and cost rendered a little more than a year ago. The owner said to the attorney for the buyer, "I knew about that judgement, and knew that I would have to pay it some day, but it goes against the grain to do so, because they put one over on me."

The attorney said, "Then we'll close the deal and you can leave $1,000 with me to take care of the judgement." This was done.

A week later the attorney sent for the owner and gave him his check back. The attorney had had the judgement waived without paying it. The owner was surprised and thanked the attorney most profusely. In my opinion he should have given the attorney a $5.00 fee, but he didn't.

How did the attorney get the judgment waived?

No execution had been issued and when no execution is issued within a year the judgment ceases to be a lien until one is issued. Dobbins vs. First National Bank 112 Ill. 553.

When the owner got home he said to his wife, "That lawyer was a nice man." I don't know what the lawyer's wife said to him. Very likely a mouthful.

IN drafting a trust deed we seldom state what the title is subject to. Do we over look the fact that a trust deed implies covenants of warranty the same as a warranty deed?

I give you a trust deed. The title is subject to a reverter. The condition is violated, the title reverts to the grantor. I am guilty of breach of warranty, but since I am also liable on the note it would be six of one and half a dozen of the other, and consequently of no importance.

If I sold the property, and my grantee got an extension of the loan, without my knowledge or consent, I would not be liable on the note, but I would be liable on the warranty of title in the trust deed.

The trust deed forms do not even contain a space for exceptions, and that's probably why we never think of them but it seems to me that it may develop into a matter of importance.

AN owner of real estate who is not personally liable on the mortgage, and does not wish to become personally liable, should be careful when he signs an extension agreement. Many, but not all, extension agreement forms are so worded as to make the owner who signs personally liable.

Houston's rolling Timbergrove Manor features 1500 large homes, heavily wooded lots

BRACE & CARRUTH, Houston realtor-builders, use newspaper display ads and Sunday morning radio spots to attract customers, but they credit most sales to their previous buyers. Their objective is to build the type of house that will best serve the owner over a long period of time, and this theme sparks their sales program.

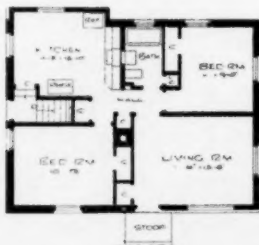

Brace & Carruth are developing 1500 lots on a suburban tract of 420 acres. Named Timbergrove Manor, the tract is generously endowed with large oaks and natural contours. Homes on the tract have areas ranging from 1000 to 2150 square feet, and the prices range from $12,550 to $30,000. Lots are from 63 feet to 150 feet in width, 120 feet and greater in depth, and are planned to take advantage of the terrain.

Each home is individually designed. Exterior variations are obtained by combining varicolored Shakertown shakes with brick and stone veneer and Ace wrought iron fixtures. Floor plans vary in size and room arrangement. Most of the houses have hip roofs covered with 215-pound composition shingles. Two-car garages are separate from the houses and are equipped with laundry facilities.

The floor plan shown here has 1326 square feet of area including porches. The L-shaped kitchen is separated from a breakfast nook by a tile-covered food counter, and is equipped with a combination General Electric dishwasher and sink with garbage disposal. Blo-Fans ventilate from above the stove. All rooms but the dining room can be entered directly from a central hall. General Electric Lavinettes and American Standard plumbing fixtures are used in the tiled bathroom. Bryant central gas furnaces and Quietaire attic fans are installed in the basementless houses.

Realtor-builder Markovitch stresses brand names in his 41/2-room brick veneer homes

REALTOR-BUILDER Leslie Markovitch of Milwaukee is planning to build from 45 to 50 two and three bedroom brick veneer homes during 1952. He completed 40 homes of the same type last year with selling prices ranging from $12,900 for a two-bedroom home to $23,500 for a three-bedroom home. All prices include lots.

Pictured is a typical two-bedroom model. It features a dining area in the kitchen, full basement with a stairway just off the kitchen and directly accessible from the outside, six closets, picture window, and central hall. Total floor space is 846 square feet. Other houses have expansion attics with space for two more bedrooms. Markovitch builds on scattered, improved lots with four to six houses in a group.

Markovitch keeps his name before the public by constantly advertising in the newspapers and by distributing various novelties. Ads are of the large display type. They include pictures of the homes that are ready for sale, their location, lot sizes, and prices. Quality features and brand names of products and equipment are described in the ads. Some of these are Janitrol, Mueller, or Biltwell gas furnaces, tile bath with colored Briggs or Kohler fixtures, Formica countertops, Rheem hot water heaters, Biltwell sheathing, and rock wool insulation in walls and ceiling. Markovitch keeps a model home open on weekends and several evenings during the week. He uses placards to point up quality features.

Builders of Long Island's Rothrock Knolls project find high buyer acceptance of professional color styling

COMPLETE color styling by Barbara Bernie Associates, divided baths, and baseboard heating characterize the houses in Rothrock Knolls, a Long Island development under construction by Rothrock Builders.

The project will have 150 houses when completed at prices around $13,000. The complete color scheme is professionally planned, a method highly acceptable to buyers.

A three bedroom model with attached garage is illustrated here. The floor plan is of a larger model but has the same room arrangement as the one illustrated. The larger model sells for $13,240 and has 6½ rooms, full basement, three bedrooms and a divided bath.

Trylon Realty, exclusive agents for Rothrock Knolls, rely on display newspaper advertising and satisfied customers to find buyers. Ads are centered on the theme "An excellent plan for those who will not compromise with quality," and they point out the quality features and conveniences of the floor plan. The larger type house and floor plan are illustrated in the ads and directions are given to the furnished demonstration model, which is kept open seven days a week. The agents give informative brochures to prospective buyers.

The Rothrock houses are located on 6,000 square feet and larger tree-shaded lots, and have foundations of poured concrete. Exteriors are brick veneer in the front and Weyerhaeuser wood or Ruberoid asbestos shingles on the other outside walls. Kitchens are equipped with Kelvinator refrigerators and Florence ranges. Baseboard radiant heating uses Warren & Webster oil-fired equipment, and the baths are equipped with Briggs colored fixtures. U. S. Gypsum products are used for sheathing and wall board.

Real estate Builder Kessler of Celina starts two subdivisions in $11,000 to $16,500 price bracket

TYPICAL house in the Woodland subdivision of Celina has 6½ rooms and 912 square feet of floor space. Builder Paul Kessler completed the 63-unit project last year and is now starting construction on two new subdivisions.

The 24 x 38-foot house has three bedrooms and bath arranged around a central hallway. A full basement is accessible both from the outside and the kitchen-dining area. Kitchen cabinets are manufactured in Kessler's shop and delivered pre-assembled to the job site. The house is equipped with American Standard plumbing fixtures, Celotex and Insulite sheathing, Armstrong linoleum, Thermopane glass, and is heated by a Sunbeam forced-air furnace. Prices of the Woodland houses are in the $11,000 to $16,500 bracket.

Other products which Kessler uses to assure quality construction are Johns-Manville, Philip Carey and Celotex roofing, Glidden paint, Amweld metal doors, Lightolier lighting fixtures, Pyrene Blo ventilating fans, and Trucon steel.

Kessler uses precutting and prefabricating techniques to speed construction and to save building costs. He employs approximately 60 men, including carpenters, masons, electricians, plumbers, painters, furnace installation crews, and landscape specialists. The Kessler homes are ready for occupancy when the crews leave the job, even down to having the lawn leveled, rolled, and seeded. As many of the original trees as possible are preserved.

What Kind of Real Estate Do Chain Stores Want?

Executives of leading chains were asked to comment on their location and leasing preferences. The result is an article loaded with information for those who deal in commercial property

WHAT locations are chain stores looking for? Will they locate in small towns? What are their space requirements? What kind of lease do they want?

These are questions that keep commercial property salesmen awake nights, because the answers aren't always too clear-cut. In the first place they differ with the different kinds of chains — a good location for a food store might not be good at all for a variety or drug company. Second, each major chain has its own preferences, its own methods of selecting sites and negotiating leases.

However, a JOURNAL survey of major chains brings out the fact that many of these differences are superficial. At least, there are enough common denominators underlying them to warrant a few general conclusions about the chain-store way of choosing property.

As soon as the subject of chain-store location comes up, a lot of us begin thinking in terms of "100% locations" — a term we'll define as that location which offers the greatest amount of the type of traffic desired. This is a good way to begin sizing up the local situation, but we mustn't stop here. Few chains insist on 100% locations; some such as food stores — definitely don't want them.

The most important asset a broker can have is a sound knowledge of the trend of expansion. This generally is in the direction of the greatest population.

but it's influenced by things like transportation services and especially by parking facilities. Many chains would rather locate in this trend of expansion than in a 100% location because they feel that the high rent of the latter is out of line with its long-range potential. Many stores that locate "in the trend" have a slow year or two and then become immensely profitable.

Even the drug chains don't all insist on 100% locations. An interesting point was brought in the JOURNAL survey in the difference between the views of the Ford Hopkins Company and the Walgreen Company in this regard. The Ford Hopkins real estate department says it will consider 100% locations only. The Walgreen Company says it is successful in many locations that are not 100%. It attributes this success directly to its advertising policy.

In judging a location, you must analyze the traffic carefully. The amount of it is not nearly so important as the kind. Buying power, shopping habits, and immediate purpose are the things to consider. A thousand people rushing past a corner on the way to catch a train don't give it the merchandising value that 10 casual shoppers give it. Foot traffic can be divided into three classifications:

- 1) People who know what they want — customers of groceries, bakeries, cigar stores, candy stores, drug stores, stationers, and so on. These people require little time to make their purchases.

- 2) Real shoppers — people who compare price and quality. These are the customers of department and variety stores, women's shoe stores, ready-to-wear shops. This group is predominantly female.

3) Customers of high-grade jewelry stores, furniture stores, and exclusive specialty stores. They do little or no shopping. They go straight to the store of their choice, buy what they want, and go home.

An expert checker not only counts the traffic but also analyzes it. He thus determines the kind of store most likely to succeed at a given location.

Most chains prefer to lease; but some, like the S. H. Kress Company, prefer to own their stores. The feeling is almost unanimously unfavorable to percentage leases, though many chains reluctantly accept them. C. R. Campbell, director of real estate for the Walgreen Company, makes a clear-cut statement on this point.

"We prefer a lease without percentage," Campbell says. "But we might accept a percentage lease provided it had a minimum guarantee which would not exceed 66⅔% of the current rental value of the property. Our percentage protects the owner in the event of inflation; we want a low minimum guarantee to protect us in the event of deflation."

The JOURNAL survey was directed chiefly at three types of chains — drug, food, and variety. Let's look briefly at the preferences of each.

Drug chains want a 100% location or something pretty close to it. They require from 3,500 to 8,000 square feet of selling space. Generally speaking, they require an equal amount of stockroom and employee space. They need two floors, first floor and basement preferred. They locate only in towns of 15,000 (Walgreen Company, 25,000) and larger. They want heavy shopping traffic and want to be where there's good business both day and night.

Food stores definitely do not want 100% locations. "We do not consider them," says G. T. Burroughs, manager of the Continental Property Company (Safeway Stores). "Because of the necessity for a large amount of parking, results are much more satisfactory at the edge of the business district or in neighborhood shopping centers."

A spokesman for another large chain stresses the need for parking, too, and also implies that the large amount of floor space required by a market makes high rentals prohibitive.

Perhaps the overall requirements of food chains are best typified by the needs of the National Tea Company, as explained by William T. Morgan, Jr.

"Generally speaking as a food operator, National Tea doesn't find what is commonly called a 100% location the most successful for its operation. This is because we need large sales area and off-the-street parking at reasonable rentals.

"Our efforts on new locations are in towns of a minimum population of 5,000 (centered in a larger trading area). Where we estimate to do half a million a year, we lease on a basis of a maximum of 10 years. Rental is either on a fixed or percentage basis. If on a percentage, we require a lower guarantee with a total maximum rental payable annually.

"At present, our space requirements are approximately 10,000 square feet of building and a minimum of one square foot of parking area for each square foot of sales space. The more available parking area, the better."

Incidentally, all the food chains questioned indicate that they are planning expansions this year.

There seems to be a lot of flexibility in the requirements of variety stores — although most of them want something not far from a 100% location. Says G. F. Terpenning, vice president of Woolworth's, "Each store or each deal is considered individually." Says W. T. Grant Company's N. W. Behrens, "The various situations we encounter may require different types of treatment."

W. Perry Huhill, vice president of J. J. Newberry Company says, "Location is of prime importance to our type of business (5 cents to $1)." About the many factors that must be considered, he says, "Is it just a Saturday night town? How about major new growth in industry? Transportation facilities? Local buying habits? One way streets? Recent store modernization?"

The Newberry Company prefers to lease, unless the store is a bargain to buy. It does not like percentage leases, signs them only with reluctance. It requires two floors with a selling space of 60 by 150 feet and additional space for stock and employees of ⅔ to ¾ that size.

Melvin B. Neisner, vice president of Neisner Brothers, Inc., says, "We will consider locating in towns of from 20,000 to 30,000 population. Retail volume is sometimes confusing because all towns apparently do not report in the same manner. We prefer to judge sales potential by making personal inspections. We are not interested in 'fringe' locations.

"We lease only. We like a term of 20 to 25 years. We prefer gross leases to percentage leases, sign the latter only as a means of developing a lower rental guarantee.

"In a downtown location, many local factors come into consideration. In addition to these we consider the general ones of physical characteristics of the property, competitive neighbors, size and importance of department stores in the vicinity, availability of parking, traffic trends. In regard to outlying centers, we should not consider the new-type drive-in shopping center without a sizeable department store."

Among other factors that brokers should consider in analyzing location trends, Neisner names: 1) Characteristics of the community in regard to production and payrolls; 2) future parking plans; 3) location and length of lease of nearby department stores; 4) variety competitors.

The Neisner Company requires a minimum store frontage of from 70 to 80 feet, a main floor sales area of from 10,000 to 12,000 square feet. It needs an additional 8,000 to 9,000 square feet for receiving stock, sorting, marking, rest rooms and other facilities.

"If the ground floor area is not sufficient and the location is particularly desirable," Neisner says, "we can add basement space only for sales and we need at least 12,000 to 15,000 square feet of sales and service space on an upper floor. For very large downtown locations, more selling space and service space may be necessary, depending upon potential volume."

Neisner says that his chain, now operating 125 stores, expects to open only one new store in the immediate future but is always on the lookout for advantageous leases.

As you can see, every type of store has its own best location and every individual chain has its own method of selection and negotiation. The best advice we can give the broker who wants to do business with the chains is this: Dig up the best location you can find in the trend of expansion, check the traffic carefully, consider transportation and parking situations, and submit your location to a chain that you think might find it profitable. Most important of all, back up your proposition with facts and figures.

In Management Reports

SIMPLICITY SAVES

No income property owner wants to wrestle with complicated reports. Nor do property managers want to complicate them if there is a more efficient and simpler method. Here are three forms used by a small management office that perform the task and help cut overhead

WHAT kind of management reports do property owners in small communities want? Damian P. Ducey, president of the Steel City Investment Company, Pueblo, Colorado, says they want a simple, readable statement with check attached. They want to see at a glance a concise breakdown of income and expenses for each unit rented, and they want a simple comparison with previous periods to appear on that statement.

Owners who invest in smaller properties don't want complicated reports or highly detailed accounting forms for monthly statements. These wants go hand-in-hand with the needs of property managers operating in small communities who must simplify their procedures to keep operating costs down.

Take Ducey's monthly accounting form pictured here. It shows clearly the month for which the report is submitted, the name of the client, and the specific property the report covers. The upper half of the form shows the total income from each rental unit. The cumulative total income running on a calendar year basis is brought forward on the form each month. Ample space is allowed for comments by the manager alongside the income entry for each unit.

The lower half of the form gives the owner a quick visual picture of all expenses for each rental unit. These are itemized and broken down into categories: capital expense, general expense (taxes, insurance, and so forth), utilities, janitor, repairs and maintenance, and management commission. A column is provided for explanation of repairs and maintenance expenses alongside their cost entry.

These items are totaled on a cumulative basis, and a total is brought forward each month showing the net remittance to date, together with total expenses and total income. Substantiating bills are attached to each monthly statement for all money disbursed during that month.

This is a very simple form, but Ducey reports that it works well in practice. At the year's end each owner has a clear picture of the total year's operation ready for use on his income tax report.

Another simple, efficient form Ducey uses is the requisition for repairs, or work order. The form has blanks for the date of issue, property address, name of the workman or the firm to make the repairs, rental unit to be repaired, and spaces for indicating whether the account is private or for the government. Plenty of white space is allowed for a description of the work to be done and the materials needed. Space for the signature of the person authorizing the repairs is conveniently located at the bottom for quick reference by both the owner and the manager.

The requisition is filled out in duplicate. One copy is given to the workman and the other copy is forwarded to the owner.

Ducy's firm reports the condition of the property to each owner every six months or oftener after making regular inspections. The property inspection report form, also has space at the top for identifying the owner, date, property, and unit. The report details the condition of the building and its various units.

Inspection areas are grouped into exterior, base- ment, and interior categories, with all important inspection points throughout the property listed in the proper category. For example, under exterior are yards and landscaping, sidewalks, foundations. A simple rating code shows the condition of each inspection point. The code uses the digits 1, 2, 3, and 4 to indicate good condition, average condition, below average condition, or attention required.

At the bottom of the form the person inspecting the property can make suggestions for repair and maintenance programs, possible needed capital improvements, and general comments about the condition of the property.

Ducy feels that the annual financial report is the most important to each owner. In the year-end financial report, Ducy's firm compares the year's operations with the preceding year and indicates where the property has been strengthened or how the company has been able to save money by good management practice.

Meeting Defense Housing Needs

By JAMES J. UPSON, Vice President

The Upson Company

BIGGEST job facing realtors and builders this year is how to provide adequate military and defense housing.

Thus far, 148 defense housing areas have been designated, and schedules set up by government agencies call for the construction of 76,935 new units — enough housing for a city the size of Dayton, Ohio.

It's estimated that 400 defense housing areas may have to be designated before the mobilization program is completed. Total requirements this year might easily amount to more than 30% of the volume of new home construction possible under existing credit and materials restrictions.

Of the new units programmed for construction, 54,980 are to be for rent and 21,955 for sale. In addition, the Public Housing Administration has been authorized to supply all the mobile or portable units that a $25 million appropriation will buy — roughly 6,000 units at current prices.

The fact that most of this housing is to be for rent, or purely temporary, is a clue to the risky nature of the program. Defense workers and military personnel represent a population shift rather than a net gain. Thus, in many localities the need for new housing may vanish as rapidly as it developed.

Although housing officials seemingly take a comfortable view of this eventuality, they aren't unmindful of the fact that many new units can be supplied simply by converting existing dwellings.

The opportunity for conversion is greater now than it has been in years. Eight percent of the country's living units are now vacant. This means 3¼ million units, all of which are habitable houses except for 485,000 units which are in a dilapidated condition and ought to be repaired in any event.

New materials and equipment are available that make conversion economical. For example, it's no longer necessary to mend or replace old plaster. Crack-proof wall and ceiling panels made of laminated wood fibre can be applied over old plaster.

Innovations in dry-wall construction likewise permit quick, inexpensive alterations. One manufacturer has pioneered a full-wall panel, 8 feet wide and up to 22 feet in length which can be installed free from joints and visible surface nailing. It has high structural strength and is water-proofed.

Restrictions on scarce materials apply in defense housing areas as they do elsewhere. Precious steel and copper can be saved by installing a new revolutionary, self-contained water closet which requires no sewer connections or water supply lines.

Plumbing costs can also be cut by installing inexpensive, glass-coated metal faucets, resistant to rust and corrosion, and easy to connect. New sewer piping is available that is easily assembled, and it does not require lead caulking and other laborious operations.

If the newly-converted living unit is to be heated by an existing warm air furnace, laminated fibre tubing can be connected economically in place of metal ducts. Where a new heating plant is needed, it might be feasible to install a new dual winter heating and summer air-conditioning unit, available in limited quantities at remarkably low cost.

For small apartment kitchens, there is a new combination sink, stove and refrigerator made in widths as narrow as 48 inches. The counter top resembles plastic; it is very hard and unaffected by intense heat. Another manufacturer is offering a new counter surfacing material which requires no metal trim. The back splash and front edge are molded as an integral part of the working surface. Made of plastic it is seamless and requires no backing.

Various materials are available to provide clean, durable walls in bathrooms and kitchens. There are glass, plastic, and metal tiles. The newest tiles on the market are six-inch rather than four-inch squares, made of laminated fibre board with a water-proof synthetic coating. Saving the usual mastic treatment required with most tiles, they can be applied directly to the studding.

New materials and equipment of this kind permit savings in labor and initial costs and will help to make productive local campaigns to convert existing dwellings to meet our defense housing needs.

big profits from a small office

Weekend salesmen, children's playground facilities, paved parking areas, flashing signs help solve some of the problems of a small, rural-suburban business

Flashing signs help clients spot Dobbs' office from adequate distance. Paved areas help them get off fast highway safely

Secretary's office connects house with Dobbs' office. Children's play facilities flank parking areas on both sides of highway

THE small-office real estate man often finds that his most profitable market is somewhat specialized, and he is faced with the need to develop off-the-beaten-track methods of dealing with it.

Take, for instance, a man in the real estate business in a small rural-suburban community, more than an hour's train ride from a metropolitan area. What sort of clientele should he try to attract? How should he go about attracting it? How should he deal with the special sales problems involved? Will the nature of his business create a personnel problem? Will it pay to develop appraisal and insurance side lines?

Ellsworth Dobbs, realtor of Bernardsville, New Jersey, describes his office as "small, definitely rural, in a suburban village." In the course of 24 years' development, he has worked out some rather neat methods geared to this community.

"Our market is made up mostly of people from the city," Dobbs says. "Young couples who will commute to work and older people who are planning to retire. Since an inspection trip takes at least half a day, most of these people descend on us during the weekends. Perhaps 85% of our selling efforts are concentrated on weekend visitors."

This means, first of all, that Dobbs had to solve a sales-personnel problem. There were likely to be either more prospects than Dobbs' salesmen could handle or too few to maintain a selling force.

He met the dilemma by hiring weekend salesmen — former customers who own homes in one or another of his tracts or subdivisions. Most of them work in New York during the week and do this weekend selling as a source of extra income. Dobbs is pleased with them. They know their neighborhood and their neighbors. They are satisfied customers who can help new customers find what they need.

Dobbs doesn't feel, however, that he can let things slide during the week and go fishing. "We get few week-day clients," he says, "but those are generally 'buyers'."

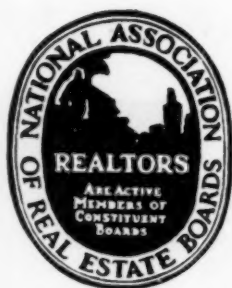

So he keeps a full-time secretary on duty. If he himself isn't available for an interview with whatever week-day visitor drops in, the secretary gets in touch with a full-time salesman or with Mrs. Dobbs — a licensed saleslady. Since prospects are likely to arrive during the evening, Dobbs has an arrangement that rings a bell in his home when the door of his office is opened. His home is adjacent to the office, connected to it by a breezeway.

Because clients come from a distance, advertising and promotion demand special attention. Dobbs believes in advertising specific offerings in the classified columns of New York papers. He stresses the fact that good ads take time and study, and he is constantly striving to improve his own.

For many years, his office has distributed street maps of the community. More recently, the local

THE National Association of Real Estate Boards re-emphasizes its basic belief that home ownership is the foundation of the American way of life and sets forth a dynamic program for 1952 to uphold the fundamentals of freedom in the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

NAREB urges:

Preserving human and property rights by forbidding the government to enter into international agreements that would impair these rights.

Limiting federal taxes for non-military uses to a percentage of the national income; providing for a regular tax to reduce the public debt; requiring a popular vote before incurring added federal debt, and appointing a Congressional committee to constantly supervise the budget.

Giving private enterprise a free hand to meet military and defense housing needs.

Repealing rent control and the public housing program.

Extending capital gains benefits to armed services members who repurchase homes within a reasonable time after discharge.

Modifying license laws to allow interstate cooperation between brokers, and seeking an adoption of license laws in states not having them.

Restoring neglected housing to new livability and usefulness through cooperation of local boards with the new NAREB Committee on Rehabilitation, and encouraging the adoption of local ordinances for minimum housing standards.

Participation of local boards in the "What the Bill of Rights Means to Me" essay contest.

Vesting no further federal authority over the state employment compensation systems.

American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers

During 1952 the Appraisers' Institute will develop and issue educational standards for real estate appraising and related fields. It will encourage and foster the training of college students preparing for a career in real estate appraising, and will cooperate with NAREB's educational programs. The institute plans to conduct research and prepare material needed for its study programs. Plans have also been made for awarding professional designation to properly qualified real estate appraisers, and promulgating rules of professional conduct for the institute's members.

Clarence M. Turley
President of AIREA

Institute of Farm Brokers

IFB is striving to increase its membership and improve its services during 1952. A multiple listing service for IFB members is now in operation, and a bulletin program committee has been set up to help select and develop subjects for publication in the Rural Realtor and the IFB Combine. The institute is considering professionalizing the institute by providing professional recognition for its members. The institute will work closely with the Realtor's Washington Committee on legislation affecting farmers and will re-activate currently inactive state chapters.

Don W. Reed
President of IFB

National Institute of Real Estate Brokers

Learn More — Earn More — and Serve Better is the theme of the Brokers Institute program for 1952. Members will receive a series of four down-to-earth bulletins dealing with selling-leasing commercial property, showing properties — knowing them and selling them, real estate advertising, and suburban development. Institute members will also receive four member letters on trends and conditions and four more on brokerage ideas. A clinic on commercial property is scheduled to be held in Chicago in May. The number of boards with complete membership in the institute has increased from 13 to 19.

Their Aims and Activities

Society of Industrial Realtors

Acting as a nationwide plant-finding service for industry and government is the number one job of SIR during 1952. The society's Washington offices are expediting requests for millions of square feet of manufacturing space by making surveys to locate plants meeting particular requirements. Because federal tax rates often critically affect corporation decisions on real estate matters, SIR will specially investigate their impact on industrial real estate transactions. Results of the findings will be distributed to members. Along educational lines, SIR plans to sponsor an industrial property appraisal course and hold regional seminars. The society will again single out the Industrialist of 1952 for the fourth annual SIR award.

Thos. McCaffrey, Jr.
President of SIR

Institute of Real Estate Management

IREM wants to reach a membership of 1400 during 1952 and increase the number of firms carrying the designation of Accredited Management Organization. The institute encourages all Certified Property Managers to take part in IREM activities and plans to expand its publicity program. Sales, advertising and management aids will be distributed to members for their management portfolios. The Journal of Property Management will be enlarged and made more interesting. Laboratory research on products used by the institute is planned and reports of the findings will supplement the regular mailing of research bulletins to members. One-day seminars and one-week courses are scheduled.

Henry G. Beaumont
President of IREM

Secretaries Council

A drive for new members highlights this year's program for the Secretaries Council. The annual seminar of real estate board administration, scheduled for Chicago in May, is planned to help board secretaries increase efficiency and iron out administrative problems. The board planning committee will continue to help local secretaries improve local board meetings. Ten issues of the Digest are scheduled for this year, and the Multiple Listing Digestaire, containing articles on the operation of multiple listing, will be published quarterly. A new committee is developing a small board record book which will expedite board record keeping.

States Council

The reactivated States Council will try in 1952, acting as an implementing agency of NAREB, to link the work of NAREB with the state associations and local boards. It will give its Annual Council Awards to the state association and local association making the greatest contribution to the public in 1952. Through the public relations department and the May and November clinics, the council will present its objectives to all state and national officers for correlated study and common action.

Willard L. Johnson
President of States C

Urban Land Institute

ULI is an independent non-profit group that studies trends affecting real property and advances research and education in planning, developing, and rebuilding cities. ULI acts as an advisor to NAREB and NAHB. The Community Builders' Council of ULI will hold meetings this year to advise on problems of suburban development, central business traffic, and others in an attempt to codify their fundamentals. The Industrial Council will study plant location, industrial district planning and zoning, dispersal and related fields, and will conduct advisory work in these fields. J. C. Nichols Foundation awards will be made to college students to encourage them to study the improvement and development of community life.

Philip W. Kniskern
President of ULI

Women's Council

Council's theme for 1952 is "Activated Citizenship." The council's major aim is to provide authentic information to its members on national political issues and to urge them to carry the information to the women of their communities. Members will be asked to see that all the women in their neighborhoods are registered voters and that they go to the polls and exercise their right to vote, thereby "activating" their citizenship. Standing objectives of the council are to help women Realtors get better acquainted and to help them solve individual problems through group action. The council urges women Realtors to get more training in the real estate field.

COMMISSION RATES OF LOCAL BOARDS

Digest of Schedules on Sales, Exchanges, Leases, Appraisals and Management in Important Cities

ON THE pages that follow, the NATIONAL REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING JOURNAL publishes again its annual digest of real estate board commission rates on sales, exchanges, appraisals, leases and management in certain key cities. In general, the cities are those having a population of 100,000 or over.

While it has not been possible to include every detail of rates schedules in this digest, it is believed that all essential provisions are accounted for. There are, in a few cases, digests of the rules having to do with leases, etc., these being included only where they have a direct bearing on the actual computation of commissions.

It is important to note that the rates given are recommended rates only.

Appraisals

The Board recognizes that appraisements are professional in character, and fees should be established accordingly. It suggests, however, that a fair minimum fee for the typical Philadelphia row house of approximately six rooms is $15.00 and that all other fees should be by mutual agreement between board member and principal.

The Philadelphia Real Estate Board does not compete with its members for appraisals. The Board offers to its members exclusively as an accommodation or as a public service an official certificate or certificates of value of any appraisal or appraisals of real estate relative to which application for appraisal is made. The charges for such service shall be as mutually determined.

Is Your Lightning Protection Adequate?

IF YOU have made any changes in buildings under your management, you may have rendered the lightning protection system ineffective, says the United Lightning Protection Association, Inc. Even installing new equipment in or on the building can put the system out of order. Examples of such equipment are telephones, radio or television antennas, water systems, and electrical systems.

One of the greatest problems is the television antenna. If the building has a protection system, have your installation man properly inter-connect the antenna to it. If there is no system, have the base of the antenna grounded with standard lightning protection cable and connections to a 10-foot grounding rod and a main water pipe. This protects the antenna but offers little protection to the rest of the building.

If you plan to make any other changes in buildings already protected, you should notify a qualified installer of lightning protection systems.

Improved construction methods make each building an individual problem. Each protection system must be designed and installed by a qualified technician, and not by an inexperienced person. A faulty lightning protection system can be more hazardous in a storm than no system at all.

Accurate statistics on lightning damages to all types of structures are not available. However, Connecticut alone estimates its annual loss at $4 million to $6 million.

The best assurance a property manager can have that his lightning protection system is adequate is a master label of approval issued by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., Chicago. These labels can be obtained only for systems passing a rigid examination by Underwriters' field workers and having all parts of approved design.

Reports of damage to the 150,000 properties already having master labels of protection are negligible, less than one-tenth of 1%.

Realtors' Multiple Listing Service has published a road map of the area, and Dobbs has found this to be greatly appreciated by prospective customers. The cost of this map is largely underwritten by local firms whose names appear on its back in directory form. The back of the map also carries a railroad time table.

Since Dobbs' office is on a state highway, he has done everything possible to make it attractive for people to stop. He has put in large paved parking lots on both sides of the road. Adjoining these are playgrounds equipped with slides, exercise bars, and see-saws that keep youngsters occupied.

Dobbs uses large white signs featuring his name and the word realtor. To offset the obstruction of a near-by gas station, he put up a neon sign over one parking lot. The name Dobbs is flashed alternately with realtor and photo listings.

The use of photographs as a selling aid has been a sort of specialty with Dobbs and he is known locally as "the realtor with the camera."

Your NEXT MORTGAGE...

- Where can you place it?
- Where can you get the BEST terms?
- At your local bank? Or out of town?

DID you know that you can sit comfortably in your own office, pick up the 'phone, and talk personally with the men who buy the real estate mortgages for mutual savings banks and insurance companies all over the United States?

All you need is a copy of (1) our currently compiled information about 527 Mutual Savings Banks which buy mortgages, and (2) our current compilation of 400 legal reserve insurance companies which buy and lend money on real estate.

This information gives you, in most instances, the name of the mortgage loan officer, and the man in charge of the real estate department. Getting in touch with him is simply a matter of putting through a 'phone call or writing a letter.

If you want to place your next mortgage on the best terms possible — if you want the very best price for a good real estate investment — our current information about these big buyers of real estate mortgages can be literally "worth its weight in gold" to you.

Let us tell you more about this profit-building service. Write us today — on your company letterhead. We'll get the details to you promptly.

get it," he says. "We have a completely equipped darkroom in the basement. We print photos of our listings on post card stock. When we get a listing that seems to fit a client's requirements, we send him a photo of it with a description written on the back."

A client-record form that Dobbs has worked out ties in with the photo-plan, revealing at a glance what type of home a prospect is in the market for. This form also simplifies all other follow-up efforts. It has spaces for the client's name and address, his employment, the number in his family, his preferences, and his price range. Then there's a space where all follow-ups are recorded. A glance at this form puts up-to-date information on any prospect at a salesman's fingertips.

Dobbs has added appraisal and insurance side lines to his business, finds they keep him busy during the slack periods between weekends.

"Years of sales experience and a good catalogue of records can be put to work in appraising," he says. "About 15% of our gross income now comes from appraisals. I'm particularly happy to be established in this work because I feel it will continue in good times or bad."

About insurance, he says, "I believe in an insurance department for the small broker and regret I didn't start one earlier. Although our department is small and the income minute in relation to that of our brokerage department, I am convinced that a small office should at least handle fire and casualty lines. These keep you in touch with your old clients throughout the years, keeps them in the habit of dealing with you — and when they want to sell, you're the firm they'll come to."

From Journal Readers . . .

"The NATIONAL REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING JOURNAL has in my opinion more information that means real money for all realtors and builders than any other magazine I have ever seen. If memory serves me right I signed the first order in which the Real Estate Board of Rochester paid for the subscriptions of all members, and this was in 1921, the year I was president of the board."

HOWARD C. RUPERT
Rochester, New York

"We rate the JOURNAL very high. You are doing a fine job — keep it up."

ROGER C. EDSON
Greenwich, Connecticut

"We subscribe to many real estate periodicals but can honestly say we get the most out of yours because it is the most practical and we do not have to wade through a lot of theory."

ROBERT WRIGHT YELLOTT
Washington, D. C.

"Some scoundrel walked off with my January issue of the NATIONAL REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING JOURNAL and I would appreciate another copy for my files if you have any spare. I am simply lost without it — as it is one of the finest informative magazines I have ever read."

FRANCIS S. JAMPOLE
Kansas City, Missouri

"Our companies, both real estate and building, have always found the JOURNAL to be a very instructive and helpful source of information for all of our employees."

Selling Job

do we stack up with the people in our community? We said earlier in this article that we must be willing to put back into our community at least as much as we expect to take out of it. If you will stop and think about it, you will find that the successful people in any community are the ones who are well known in the community. Which came first? Did they become successful before they were well known? It is much more likely that in the process of becoming well known, they almost automatically became successful. The fellow who is always willing to take the time to do something good for his community usually finds that the community will take the time to do something good for him. If this is true, then it becomes difficult to believe that you can't afford to donate a little time for civic affairs, doesn't it?

If you are not completely happy with the town you take your living from, maybe you should do a little selling job on yourself. It doesn't matter where you live — if you expect to make your living there, to you it should be the best place to live in all the world! And if you think so, SAY SO — and show that you mean it!

And if you are going to take the time to do these things, you might as well be the leader, instead of the fellow who just goes along for the ride. You are going to use up so much time, anyhow. Why not put it to its best use?

It isn't fair to the reader, or to the writer of this article, to try to discuss the advantages of participation in civic affairs in three or four paragraphs — because even a brief explanation of the things a civic-minded real estate man can accomplish would fill the remaining pages of this magazine.

We started out to ask what kind of a selling job are we doing. We weren't talking about the rules of selling, we were talking about the kind of point of view we were allowing people to have about the real estate business. "Point of view" can be influenced from within our own office, from our dealings with other real estate people, and from what we do to be an important part of our community.

When people look at you — what's their point of view?

Management Business

bring in business but also to keep it. For example, our visible rental payment card system. In this we have a picture of each property, a complete floor plan of it with all dimensions, a rental record card (one side contains space for keeping a three-year payment record), and the tenant's name, address, apartment number, monthly rental, lease period, residence and business phone. This card also serves as an application card on the reverse side.

There is also another card that shows the equipment in each apartment, the services furnished, and the number and kind of rooms with size of each. Space is provided for keeping a record of the turnover of tenants in each apartment. Colored tabs can be attached to each card to show apartments that are for rent and tenants who are delinquent in their rent.

We never pass up an opportunity of showing this system and our other records to those who visit our office, for we feel this is one of the best ways to obtain and keep management business.

Tax facts

TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS TAX FACTS

BY BERT V. TORNBORGH, CPA

EARNEST MONEY is usually paid on the signing of a contract for the purchase of real estate. In case where such money is paid by a purchaser to a contractor, and contractor later absconds, the buyer is entitled to full loss deduction from theft or embezzlement.

INCOME TAX WITHHOLDING where an employee works for more than one employer usually gives rise to question "on what basis is withholding calculated for each employer?"

As long as the employers are not in any way related, the employee may file a withholding exemption certificate with each employer claiming in each case, all the exemptions to which he is entitled.

This does not apply when one person makes the wage payment for more than one employer or where there is some sort of arrangement for joint use of services. In such cases total payment of wages is regarded as one wage under one set of exemptions.

PACKING PLANT spent $5,000 to concrete-line basement walls and floors to stop oil seepage from nearby refinery. The court ruled entire amount was deductible expense. (Point here is that the expenditure helped to offset a detriment to the use-value of the building, but did not necessarily enhance its salability or boost its market value.)

A CONSTRUCTION ENGINEER worked under two-year contract in Afghanistan. The contract was terminable sooner if the job was completed. The tax court ruled that he was not a bona fide foreign resident and his income, therefore, was not tax exempt.

Can you have an option to buy back the property at the end of the lease-term? There seems to be no reason why not, assuming of course that it is based on arm'slength considerations and not buying back the property for $1.00 or any like terms. But in any event watch the treasury attitude on these options.

INJUNCTIONS TO RESTRAIN A TAX COLLECTOR are rare but were issued in a recent case of valid family partnership where one partner involved the partnership in his own personal troubles and the collector proceeded against the partnership property. The injunction of the court said that this was done improperly and must be set aside...

COST OF AIR RAID SHELTERS is deductible as business expense if the bomb shelter is totally useless to the taxpayer for any other purpose, says a special treasury ruling. But if the shelter will be useful in the taxpayer's business in later years, and particularly if cost was "substantial," it should be capitalized and depreciation deductions should be taken over the estimated useful life. This leaves open the question of what should be considered "substantial" cost and the even more moot point of "estimated useful life" of a bomb shelter. Who knows?

TENANT MADE LEASE-HOLD IMPROVEMENTS, wanted to charge them off over the term of the original lease, even though it knew that the renewal option would be exercised. The tax court decided that proper write-off should be over the term of the lease as extended.

TAXPAYER RENTED OUT EQUIPMENT, giving a purchase option that was eventually exercised. Sale resulted in capital gain, said the tax court, and rentals paid, and interest, made up part of the purchase price.

KANSAS FARM WAS SOLD, with growing wheat crop standing. The seller said land and crop were both capital assets, claimed benefit of capital gains taxation on the sale. Record showed that the buyer gave consideration to crop value in determining the price he offered and the tax court ruled that that part of the sales price which was in payment for the crop was ordinary income to the seller, and not capital gain, as was the land sale.

INTEREST IN INCOME-PRODUCING BUILDING was inherited by a taxpayer. The building had earlier been put up by a lessee. The term of the lease ran beyond the useful life of the building. The taxpayer claimed depreciation, and the tax court agreed, saying she was entitled to depreciation based on the fair market value of the building at the date of death of the taxpayer's mother from whom property was inherited. With the help of expert testimony the tax court further, in this case, found the fair market value to be $800,000.

SALE OR LEASE was the question before the tax court in a case where agreement had been made for the taxpayer to take title to a business under a "rental" agreement. The taxpayer paid a total of $45,000 during the tax year concerned, sought to deduct this as rentals paid. The court said "no," it was a capital investment.

TRAVEL EXPENSES AND COMMISSIONS were paid by cash or by checks drawn to the order of cash, and the treasury disallowed the deductions. However, the company treasurer substantiated the payments before the tax court and it permitted a deduction for miscellaneous expense.

UNCLE SAM HAD POSSESSION of a taxpayer's property under lease, after threat of condemnation proceedings. The taxpayer later got compensation for property destroyed, damaged or converted while in possession of the United States. Such "gain" was taxable, ruled the tax court, as long-term capital gain.

SPECULATOR USED TIME, ENERGY and sometimes capital, found the tax court, in putting a number of business ventures on their feet, all of varied types. A mining operation was therefore not an isolated transaction but part of this taxpayer's regular business. Accordingly, ruled the court, the taxpayer was entitled to a net operating loss carry-over sustained in the preceding year.

Journal editors and staff members have spent many months gathering all of the bits of information shown in this issue, the largest Roster of Realtors ever published. It's been a pleasure because the issue shows the tremendous growth of NAREB. Just 10 years ago, in 1942, the Roster carried 484 Boards and the names of 15,622 active members. This issue, the 33rd annual Roster, lists 47,565 active members in 1,115 Boards. That growth and influence wouldn't have been possible without the able leadership NAREB has had over the years.

Public housing is expensive in more ways than one. The police chief of Los Angeles reports having to make 96% more calls in one of the city's public housing areas than in an adjoining slum area. Calls per thousand for different areas: privately operated housing development, 0.8; temporary housing for veterans, 6.75; "The Flats" (slum area), 7.0; public housing project, 13.75.

"The 1952 home buyer is in the saddle," says Norman Strunk of Chicago, executive vice president of the United States Savings and Loan League. "He has a good supply of housing to choose from, plenty of home financing, and he can be reasonably certain that prices will not rise any appreciable extent."

Home Builders Association of Des Moines is launching a new public information program in hopes of stimulating demand for new homes and improving builders' relations with the public. The program, directed by Realtor-Builder Jim Leverett, includes a school and college educational service, publication of a home owner's manual, and newspaper, radio, and television publicity on the association.

Al Summer, NAREB's immediate past president, practices "Indian-giving" with his employees on payday to help make them aware of the tax load. Summer pays out full salaries each Friday morning. At the end of the day he takes back from each employee the total of withholdings. Summers says the system pounds home the facts about federal spending.

Real estate offices, along with most other types of businesses, are having a difficult time keeping pace with the mass of government regulations. The Department of Labor reports that 59% of the real estate offices investigated during the past fiscal year were found to have violated the Fair Labor Standards Act. Provisions said to have been violated were minimum wages, overtime pay, and child labor. The moral: keep abreast of Washington rulings, and avoid hiring 14-year-olds on your sales force.

Many readers have asked if the JOURNAL has group subscription rates. They say they're tired of having their copies of the JOURNAL garnered by their employees or associates. The answer is "Yes," the JOURNAL does have group rates. If five or more people in your office would like to have their own personal copies, write in to the JOURNAL office for information about these special rates.

News Nibblings: A. Fredrick Smith of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, is the new chairman of the Advisory Committee on Defense Areas to the DPA. . . Nearly 83% of the dwelling units built in Houston last year were for one-family occupancy. National average for urban areas of 2500 or more population is 73.1%. . . Prospects are bright for heavy remodeling activity. Two out of every three of our 46 million homes are at least 20 years old. . . John C.
